CHARLIE BROWN knows the feeling only too well. And Eric Majer, 3, of North Vancouver, showed his dejection clearly when he encountered a kite-eating tree on Ambleside like the ones that regularly crop up in the Times comic strip Peanuts. Ah well, Eric, console yourself that you're unlikely to be as much of a perennial loser as Charlie Brown.

450 Ferry Workers Facing Layoffs

Cost-saving measures under way at the B.C. Ferries could mean lay-offs of up to 450 employees, the Times learned today.

A union official says his people are "the first bunch of sacrificial lambs" to the Social Credit government. But ferries officials claimed the service is overstaffed.

Negotiations between the service and the union to determine what will happen to the people involved when 450 jobs are eliminated began three weeks ago and another meeting is scheduled for Wednesday.

Norm Thornber, business agent for the marine services general component of the B.C. Government Employees Union said today the government is willing to sacrifice people so the ferry service can become a profit-making venture.

Thornber said the negotiations are at a "completely frustrated stage, we're dealing with a very heartless employer."

But ferries general manager Charles Gallagher said today the service has always been overstaffed and cutbacks have long been needed to make it efficient.

The general manager said he is surprised the union brought the issue to the public and said the move will not do anything to assist in easy settlement of the problem.

According to the master agreement people with less than two years service with the ferries can be laid off and Gallagher said there are more than 450 people who fall into that category.

But the jobs to be eliminated are not all filled by new employees and the majority of the jobs to be abolished are in the catering department, as the ferry service plans to cut out dining room facilities.

People with more than two years service with the ferries must be retrained and relocated within the government, under the master agreement, and Gallagher said newer employees may also be found other jobs.

Gallagher said one concern of experienced people who will retain employment is that they would have to assume lesser positions.

Thornber said the union will negotiate on relocation so people won't lose their jobs, "but's that's small consolation for someone who's been employed in one department for 16 years."

The ferry union will go into negotiations Wednesday and offer to buy the entire B.C. ferry fleet for "one buck".

BCR, UNION TO RESUME NEGOTIATIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Transportation Union agreed Monday to stop its work-to-rule campaign as the union and British Columbia Railway agreed to resume contract negotiations.

Paul Weiler, chairman of the B.C. Labor Relations Board, announced the steps following a 12-hour meeting Monday with the two sides.

"The parties have agreed to resume face-to-face negotiations and the board has agreed to provide two of its members to observe these negotiations and to give assistance," said Weiler.

The cease-and-desist order was to remain in effect until the end of the LRB hearings.

RIVER COULD CATCH FIRE

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Authorities may soon have to put up no-smoking signs along the banks of the Tlalnepantla River to prevent it from going up in flames.

Biochemical engineer Miguel Romero says a study he made shows the waterway outside Mexico City is so highly contaminated with human and chemical wastes that it is "highly inflammable."

The Tlalnepantla is also so toxic that inspectors checking the degree of pollution had to take anti-tetanus injections, according to Romero.

He said that anyone swimming in the river was certain to go bald.

"We saw one child fall in and, while he was being dried, all his hair fell out," the engineer said.

Housing Starts In B.C. Set Record

Times News Services

Housing starts in urban British Columbia set a record first quarter total of 5,454, up 58 per cent from the same period in 1975, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported Monday.

In Victoria, housing starts increased 120.3 per cent, to 282 from 128 in 1975. Greater Vancouver figures showed an increase of 94 per cent, an increase to 1,605 units from 827.

Across urban Canada, the number of starts almost doubled, from 18,367 in the first quarter of 1975 to 36,489 this year.

On a seasonally-adjusted basis, CMHC estimates, annual rate of B.C. starts is 26,500 units, while in urban Canada the total is 196,900. In all areas of Canada housing starts are at a rate of 251,000 for the year.

The Vancouver area total of newly-completed, unoccupied houses, duplexes and apartment units at the end of February rose this year to 3,055 compared with 2,699 when the year began and 2,607 a year ago.

Victoria also has more completed but unoccupied dwellings. At the end of February, there were 350 units vacant compared with 245 a year earlier, an increase of 43 per cent.

Current apartment projects under construction at the end of February, with last year's starts at the same time in brackets where applicable: Kelowna 4 (44), Nanaimo 8, Prince George 12, Vancouver 154 (13), total for B.C. 582 (245).

ECONOMY BOOSTED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) The U.S. economic recovery quickened in the first three months of the year and the overall inflation rate subsided to its lowest level since the third quarter of 1972.

The increase in the output of goods and services, at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent in the first quarter, was bigger than the 6 to 6.5 per cent which had been expected.

While the economy was stepping up smartly the level of output, prices were increasing at an annual rate of 3.7 per cent, down sharply from a 6.8 per cent annual rate in the fourth quarter and the overall 8.8 per cent rise in 1975.

Maynard Comiez, acting chief economist for the department of commerce, said there is little doubt that the economy, as measured by the so-called real Gross National Product, will grow more this year than the 6.2 per cent the administration predicted it would last January.

Already the unemployment rate has fallen to 7.5 per cent for March and if production keeps improving, even at a rate slower than in the first quarter, the unemployment rate should continue to fall.

Canadian Rhodesian Hero

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — A Canadian living in South Africa has emerged as the hero of a guerrilla attack inside Rhodesia on Sunday in which three South African tourists were killed.

Eyewitness reports reaching Salisbury and Johannesburg today said Douglas Plumsteel, a UBC graduate from West Vancouver, put the guerrillas to flight by opening fire with his pistol after the attack on a lonely stretch of road about 60 miles inside Rhodesia.

Plumsteel, who now lives in Johannesburg and who was travelling with his wife Margaret, arrived at the scene after the three South Africans had been shot dead and their woman companion wounded.

Behind him in another car was farmer Jannie de Beer, who drove up as Plumsteel began firing at the guerrillas.

De Beer said today: "Mr. Plumsteel was standing outside his car and he called out to me to put my headlights out and keep quiet. I got out of my car and saw two motorcycles lying on the road. Three bodies were beside them.

"A girl was also lying in the road. She was bleeding and pretty badly wounded, but was conscious. The young chap with the gun told me he would provide covering fire while I picked up the girl and the bodies. I had an African with me and we picked them up and put them in our vehicles.

Police Strike N.B. Capital

Times News Services

FREDERICTON New Brunswick's capital city was left without police protection today as the city's 77-man police force went on strike for more pay, refusing response to all but life-endangering emergencies.

City and police spokesmen reported scattered vandalism, break-ins, traffic jams and drag-racing on the main streets of this city of 45,000 after the strike began at midnight, but no major crimes.

In Moncton, with a population of 60,000, the city's 117 policemen vote today to decide if they, too, will go on strike.

Some all-night Fredericton restaurants closed following the police strike and many shopkeepers remained on their premises during the night to guard against looting and theft.

"We've been assured that if public safety is endangered the province will act immediately, either by ordering an end to the strike or sending in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police."

The city has offered increases giving a first-class constable with three years' service and now earning $11,000 annually approximately 27 per cent over a 36-month contract.

Police have demanded about the same amount over a one-year agreement.

OUT OF JAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victor Fisher, a Delta, businessman, has been released from the Mexican jail where he had been held since Jan. 7 over a bank cheque mixup and placed in a hospital for treatment of an infected ankle injury.

Mexican friends of Fisher's said in a telephone interview Monday he was removed from the jail to a hospital in Manzanillo after they pleaded his case before Mexican authorities April 12.

"Mr. Fisher feels fine and is getting along nicely with the treatment for the ankle injury," according to a Mexican business man who assisted a Mexican lawyer in arranging for Fisher's removal from the jail to hospital.

"Moving Mr. Fisher from the jail to the hospital was the first step. Other steps will be taken to effect his complete release within a few days," he said.

9-MILE TRAFFIC JAM

All main rail services were crippled by the walkout, which affected about 40 million people, more than one-third of the country's population. (See picture on page 2.)

The strike which started midnight Monday night was called by the two powerful unions of the state-owned Japan National Railways, to spearhead this year's annual spring labor offensive.

They were joined after a few hours by workers on 11 of Japan's 15 major private rail companies.

Municipal transport staff in 39 cities halted bus and subway services for a few hours until 8 a.m.

About 10,000 police were mobilized to prevent any confusion at bus and rail stations, as well as to guard against possible activities by left-wing and right-wing extremists.

The transport ministry estimated the strike will affect 19 million users of the national rail network and 21 million customers of the 11 private firms.

Workers at some Tokyo firms slept at their offices Monday night, arriving for duty with supplies of clean shirts, socks, hand towels and soap—ready for a three-day stay away from home.

Arabs Stone Israelis In Third Day of Riots

Times News Services

JERUSALEM Palestinian Arabs stoned Israeli troops, lit bonfires and halted traffic today during more rioting protesting the Israeli occupation of West Jordan and Jerusalem.

Israeli troops put a curfew on the town of Tulkarm after Arab students threw up roadblocks on the main street and clashed with security forces. Several rioters were arrested.

Israeli troops also broke up small riots in Jenin, and Nablus, where a Palestinian Arab was killed by army gunfire Monday.

Arabs also marched in Bethlehem to protest the occupation.

Two policemen and a soldier were hurt before security forces broke up the protest and arrested four Arabs.

The incidents occurred as tens of thousands of ultra-nationalist Israelis completed a two-day march through the district to demand more Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

All shops in Nablus were closed during the funeral, and some Arabs threw stones at passing Israeli vehicles.

The 20-mile march passed off without incident until the participants approached the finishing point on the outskirts of Jericho.

Young Arabs stoned vehicles which came to pick up the marchers and Israeli security forces moved in to disperse Arab demonstrators.

Gunfire Shatters Truce

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Lebanon's 28th cease-fire in a year of civil war began today the same as 27 others — with the sound of gunfire raging across Moslem-Christian battle lines.

Ten hours after the latest truce went into effect at midnight, mortar and machine-gun fire echoed around the worst battle areas.

At least 60 persons died Monday, 40 other corpses were discovered and more than 100 were wounded.

Earlier, Syrian, Lebanese and Palestinian represenatives reached agreement on five main points to enforce the cease-fire.

The truce provided for:

Scientists Are Now Taking Nessie Seriously

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

NEW YORK — After years of ridicule directed against reports of a Loch Ness "monster," scientists have begun to take seriously the possibility that such a creature does indeed inhabit the depths of the Scottish lake.

Publications currently issued from such institutions as Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology treat as plausible the evidence collected last summer and three years earlier purporting to show that a large animal inhabits Loch Ness.

The evidence, much of it presented last December in London, was then received with considerable skepticism. Now, however, it has won support from several prominent specialists. It is described in articles in Technology Review, published at M.I.T., and by MCZ Newsletter, published by Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology.

Dr. Alfred W. Crompton, professor of biology at Harvard and director of the museum, has told the Loch Ness investigators that he personally finds the "evidence "extremely intriguing." It is, he said, "sufficiently suggestive of a large aquatic animal" to call for more intensive investigations along the lines already used in 1972 and 1975.

Nanaimo Strike Break in Sight

NANAIMO — The civic shutdown entered its third week Monday, but a break may come tonight as one of the union locals involved votes on a contract offer.

Local 1858 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, the non-teaching staff of Malaspina College, will vote tonight on a contract offer from the college, but the two other locals involved, civic and school board employees, are still waiting for a resumption of bargaining.

Malaspina was closed for several days after school board employees posted pickets at the college, but the pickets were later withdrawn and since then the college has been bargaining separately with its 60 CUPE members.

The other two locals bargain with the Mid-Island Public Employers Association, formed last summer as a bargaining agent.

Representatives of the 500 civic and school board employees met the employers at a bargaining session last week chaired by provincial mediator Clark Gilmour.

CUPE spokesman Joy Leach said the employers were given a set of union proposals to study and they are "still deliberating."

She said it was "alarming" that the process was taking so long and "everyone is looking for a settlement to see the community returned to normalcy."

Dick Weibelzahal, assistant secretary-treasurer of the school board, said the employers had not finished looking at the union proposals. He said the next meeting will be at the call of Gilmour.

All school classes have been cancelled since the strike began April 5, but the schools are open for students to hand in and pick up assignments from teachers.

Weibelzahal said most students seem to be taking advantage of the open schools and are not falling behind "too badly."

He said teachers have told him they are working harder now than during regular school sessions

All civic operations, including garbage collection, have been shut down since April 5.

A DRUNKEN BASH

MOSCOW (UPI) — A Russian farmer has been sentenced to four years imprisonment for crashing his tractor into the front of a shop whose employees refused to sell him vodka, the newspaper Izvestia said today.

The man, identified as B. Khlistunov, rammed the shop three times after employees told him he was drunk and would not give him more alcohol.

According to Izvestia, the first assault with his tractor left the shop's staircase in ruins. His second run knocked the corner off the building. The blitz ended on the third attack, when the tractor became lodged in the shop's doorway.

"That saved customers and employees inside," said Izvestia.

$55,000 Damages In Traffic Mishap

General damages of $55,000 were awarded in B.C. Supreme Court today to a San Franciso man injured in a traffic accident near Chemainus in 1973.

Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane made the award in favor of George Michael Richards, a passenger in a southbound car on the Trans-Canada highway.

Driver of the car, John White, also from San Francisco, was killed and Richards was injured. White's mother was awarded $5,000 general damages.

Special damages of $9,766 were awarded to Richards and $4,360 for Mrs. White.

Mr. Justice Macfarlane said Richards suffered a "major disruption" to the enjoyment of his life. He had been an outgoing person and now was withdrawn.

He said Richards' loss of income to date was probably $17,000 to $18,000 and psychiatric treatment is costing $3,500 a year.

Ken Murphy, who represented White and Richards, told the court earlier that his client's car was struck on their side of the road by a truck forced to take evasive action after a van, which was overtaking the truck, went out of control.

The van went up a bank and came down straddling the two northbound lanes on its roof.

The truck swerved to avoid the van, then struck White's car. White was killed instantly.

New Battles Shatter 28th Truce in Beirut

The setting up of "deterrent forces" to patrol battle lines — Palestinian and Leftist militiamen in the Moslem western sector of Beirut and Phalangist and National Liberal Party forces in the Christian eastern areas.

Establishing a permanent site for the supreme military committee to meet at the ministry of public health building on the "green line" between East and West Beirut.

Meanwhile, a Toronto Star correspondent was reported missing today, possibly kidnapped on his way to Beirut airport for a flight out of the Middle East.

The star said Gerald Utting, last cabled the newspaper early Monday, saying: "Leaving today for Athens. Trust I get to the airport in one piece, as a lot of people don't."

About eight hours later, the Star said, one of its stringers, Faris Glubb, telexed from Beirut: "I am informed that on the way to the airport Utting was stopped by armed men and kidnapped.

"I have asked the Palestine Liberation Organization to try to trace him and secure his release, which in this part of Beirut is the only effective way of locating kidnapped persons."

In a story published last Wednesday, Utting told of how he had been arrested at gunpoint by a Palestinian group and held for several hours shortly after his arrival in Beirut.

When they were satisfied he was not a mercenary they released him and issued him a PLO pass in Arabic script, the story said.

He was told the pass would get him through areas controlled by the PLO but warned him if he went to the side of the Phalangists (Christian militia) he would be killed if they saw the pass.

The Washington Post's Jonathan Randal reports a separate state is growing slowly but surely for one million grim and beleagured Lebanese Christians blockaded along the Mediterranean east of Beirut. Deprived of gasoline and subsisting on expensive imported food, they are beginning to show the signs of an exodus estimated at 5,000 in the past month. See Page 16.

Ferry Layoffs

BCGEU general secretary John Fryer said.

He said the ferry service has been clumsily managed for 16 years and "now they are preparing to set things right by firing people."

The union will not initiate a work stoppage over the issue, he said, "but the management appears to be trying to provoke a strike and then use its legislative powers to bring us back into line."

In a civil service of 40,000 employees, there should be no trouble in finding jobs for 450 people, Fryer said.

He said the elimination of 450 jobs represents a cutback of 20 per cent in the marine services membership of 2,500.

Major ferries in the system are staffed with 49 people now and Gallagher said, according to Canada Steamship Regulations they could operate with 31 employees.

Gallagher said there is no schedule for reducing staff but he expects lay-offs to begin by early June when three new ferries are put into service. Those ferries do not have dining rooms.

"The question is whether taxpayers should pay for food services. We have to look with a reasonable eye and say what business are we in," said Gallagher.

"I've always thought we were in the transportation business and how many people are needed to run an efficient transportation system?"

Nessie Taken Seriously

Similar comments have been made by Dr. George R. Zug, curator of reptiles and amphibians at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington; by Dr. Christopher McGowan, associate curator in the department of vertebrate paleontology at the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto, and by the chairman, vice chairman and executive director of the New England Aquarium in Boston.

In a statement of their unanimous views, five zoologists and paleontologists at the Natural History Museum in London are more cautious.

They agree that the 1972 photographs, when enhanced by computer processing and analysis, show a "flipper-like object." They are not, however, convinced that the 1975 photographs show a plump body and small head, linked by an elongated neck, as the search team believed. Since much of the hypothetical neck does not appear, they suggest that two objects are involved. These, they add, may have been swarms of phantom midge larvae whose air sacs could have produced the images.

Nevertheless, authors of the report on the search in the March-April issue of Technology Review argue that sonar echoes from the rapidly moving object or objects, which seemingly show in some photographs, are those of a creature 10 to 50 times larger than fish observed with the same photographic system.

The sonars used were of the side-scan type widely employed in searching for sunken ships and in offshore oil-drilling operations. One model was produced by Raytheon and another by Klein Associates, whose president, Martin Klein, an M.I.T. alumnus, was a co-author of the report. The sonar echoes were interpreted by several outside specialists.

MIGHTY MITE isn't so strong, after all. What appears to be a vintage Austin Seven under tow by a tiny replica is actually the bigger vehicle guiding its smaller travelling companion by means of a tow-line connection. Both autos took part in an Easter parade in London.

Midget Gunmen Weren't

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Two 10-year-old boys tried to rob a branch of the Liberty National Bank with a cap gun and a water pistol, authorities say.

The boys entered the bank Monday, announced a stickup and ordered the manager to end his telephone conversation, police said.

The manager, who is near-sighted and was not wearing his glasses, said he did not notice that the guns pointed at him were toys or that the midget gunmen were youngsters.

"We just wanted some pennies for the gumball machine," one of the boys told police.

Further Que. Teacher Protest Wednesday?

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec teachers geared up Monday for further protest action this week with Wednesday singled out by union leaders as the likely date for another in the series of illegal one-day strikes to back contract demands.

The date of the next walkout was to be confirmed at a meeting today of the liaison committee of the 180,000-member common front of public servants, but a spokesman for the province's three largest teacher federations — with a combined membership of 85,000—said Wednesday was their choice.

"We're leaning strongly to Wednesday," said John Vanderkaay, spokesman for the Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers.

He indicated a final decision will not be forthcoming until the liaison committee meets, "but right now, things look pretty good for that day."

Provincial legislation enacted April 8 makes strikes in the education sector illegal and provides for heavy fines for unions and individuals violating its provisions.

Several teacher unions will appear in court across the province this week to defend themselves against charges laid last week in connection with a province-wide walkout April 13.

If the common front orders a general walkout, Quebecers also will find themselves without all but the most essential hospital services.

Renaud Flynn, union leader of 60,000 hospital employees affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, said his membership is being asked to defy all court injunctions keeping them on the job and to ignore government dictates on what essential services to maintain in each institution.

Flynn said the workers will decide from now on what services are essential. In several recent walkouts, workers withdrew all services, forcing the evacuation of patients to other hospitals.

Hundreds of others were discharged prematurely and the government is investigating two cases where the death of a patient has been liked to withdrawal of services.

Meanwhile, spokesmen for the various teacher federations indicated they expect little from a three-man board of commissioners appointed by the Quebec government to look into their dispute.

The commissioners received a mandate to investigate both sides of the dispute without making any binding recommendations.

YOUTH DIES OF INJURIES

Douglas Cooper, 15, of Nanaimo died in Victoria General Hospital Monday from injuries received Sunday in a head-on collision about 10 miles east of Port Alberni on Highway 4.

Cooper was riding in a car driven by Guy Patterson of Ucluelet which was in collision with a car driven by Terry Wilner of Vernon. Both drivers suffered broken legs in the crash.

Sterilization Sparked Riot

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Witnesses to New Delhi's first major outbreak of violence since a nation-wide state of emergency was declared last June said today the three-hour riots began when officials bulldozing houses of squatters offered to relocate them only of they would be sterilized.

Sources said at least 10 persons were killed in the riots, in which police opened fire with automatic weapons and shot tear gas into crowds that numbered up to 5,000 persons.

Many rioters threw bottles and bricks from rooftops onto members of the Border Security Force, the para-military organization which India calls in to handle riots.

One witness said he saw bodies of policemen being loaded onto trucks when the fighting ended and police imposed a 24-hour curfew.

One estimate put the number of dead policemen at 20 to 30.

Residents in the area, a slum by western standards but for long time a busy commercial district, said many people were angered at having to undergo sterilization to get new housing.

The area is heavily Moslem amd Moslems have protested energetically against proposals for forced sterilization.

The censored press did not report the incidents at all. It merely printed a statement issued late Monday night by the lieutenant-governor of New Delhi, Krishna Hand, warning that drastic action will be taken against persons interfering with family planning workers.

Angola Recognized

LUSAKA (AP) Zambia has formally recognized the Angolan government. The announcement from Foreign Minister Rupiah Banda was in a single-sentence statement issued by the information and broadcasting ministry. Zambia supported the rival Western-backed factions in the civil war for control of Angola and was one of a few African countries to withhold recognition of the Angolan government.

Lumpy and Unattractive

As the Trudeau government girds its loins to pass the Orwellian-titled "peace and security" package it is interesting to note the marketing of this blunderbuss legislation. A thick package from Ottawa contains Bill C-83 plus a 12-page explanation of the gun control measures, complemented by a purple pamphlet entitled Questions and Answers Regarding Proposed Gun Control Legislation. Nowhere does the material explain why the government is allowing a complete invasion of privacy through virtually uncontrolled police wiretaping, also part of the package.

Perhaps it is indicative of how this government thinks people will react to its strange legislative package. We are bludgeoned with misleading statistics and then informed that increased gun control — it will license owners as opposed to registering guns — is not intended to prevent Canadians from owning firearms. Yet the public is not invited to debate measures that will allow authorities to monitor almost any private conversation they please. It is almost as if we are being cajoled into immersing ourselves in gun control debate — a political issue championed by government as a foil to its abolitionist philosophy — so we won't notice the erosion of our few freedoms.

This bill was cynically conceived and is being cynically sold. We do not see any rationale to reverse the present law, making illegally obtained wiretap evidence admissible in a court of law. Nor is there any explanation for lifting the requirement that police must notify a wiretapped person within 90 days of the expiration of the listening permit. In fact there is no discussion of why most of the restrictions on wiretapping are being scrapped. At the same time new parole and sentencing clauses are not mentioned either. Should persons guilty of exhibitionism or seduction of young girls be sentenced to indefinite terms in prison? This is the latter part of the 20th century. An indefinite term can mean life imprisonment. The whole package is lumpy and unattractive.

It would seem the Trudeau administration has sized us up as a bunch of reactionary clods pursuing a narrow destiny towards law and order at any cost. Abolishing capital punishment is a good idea in itself, one that is backed by this newspaper. But like anything else it should become law only if the electorate through its representatives believe it is right. To sell this one principle, the government is willing to destroy our privacy. It is an odious trade.

Each issue should stand and be judged on its own merits. The complex package is billed as reform. Once the wrapper is removed, however, it can be seen for what it is: a reactionary series of measures wrapped in Liberal rhetoric. When the bill goes before the Commons justice committee opposition and private government members should point its faults and propose amendments. Untreated, this package is a raw accumulation of prejudices aimed at emotional minorities. These kinds of nerve ganglia should not be probed for political purposes in any Canadian legislature.

". . . excuse me, I'd like another packet of those tiny little jet-black seeds I bought here last year . . . I can't remember the name but they were slightly oval with a pale green lumpy spot on one end . . . they grew into giant crescent-shaped bushes absolutely smothered in tiny trumpet-like red flowers with funny black sticky things in the middle and a strange sweet oniony fragrance, especially during thunderstorms . . ."

No Loitering

A glass of wine in the sunshine, a chair from which to watch civilization stroll by, good food in the open fresh air. Such surroundings have been celebrated from Sartre to Hemingway to Callaghan, and probably stimulated more good literature than a thousand Canada Council grants set end to end.

All right, it's a bit exaggerated, but if you want to idle an afternoon away there's no better place than a sidewalk cafe. Paris has them. Montreal and Toronto have them. Even Vancouverites have caught the disease. But Victorians won't be able to even try one out (Trounce Alley's dark cave excepted) because city council won't authorize so much as an experiment on the vaunted Government Street mall.

The city council roads committee rejected an application from a Government Street restaurant to put a few tables and chairs on the sacred mall and extend its awning out over them. Just the committee's chairman, Ald. John Hayes, favored authorization of an experiment with the outdoor cafe.

The rest of the committee, mossbacks all, kept thinking up reason after reason why it wouldn't, couldn't or shouldn't be allowed to work. Ald. Bob Wright said the sidewalks shouldn't be cluttered up in a haphazard way, and Ald. Alf Hood said it might prompt a flood of merchants who want to spread their wares on city sidewalks, Middle East bazaar fashion, presumably.

Hood's claim that Ottawa's Sparks Street mall "proved a disaster" in respect to outdoor restaurants, is as false as the rest of the reasoning behind rejection of the Government Street application. The national capital's mall was one of the first in Canada and is probably the most successful. For one thing, it's a true mall — no traffic, except on a few side streets which cut across it — and for another, Ottawa allows eateries out in the open. You can even get a glass of beer there.

Most of the aldermen believe the Government Street mall hasn't lived up to its billing as a "people place," but when someone comes along with an idea to actually make it an interesting place to be, council stomps on him. Can someone explain that?

PAUL WHITELAW

Jimmy's Not So 'Pure'

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's presidential campaign is being haunted by two words: Ethnic purity. The former Georgia governor used that unfortunate and inflamatory expression last week and his chief rivals for the Democratic presidential nomination won't let anyone forget.

Carter, meanwhile, is attempting to polish his tarnished image as a representative of the progressive New South and scrambling to undo the damage to his campaign.

But the term "ethnic purity," particularly when used by a white southern politician, is a racist code word to many Americans. It rekindles memories of violently enforced racial segregation in the states of the old confederacy and efforts of the Klu Klux Klan to maintain "the purity of the white race."

What Carter said, in an interview with the New York Daily News, is hardly as alarming—although the position is unacceptable to some liberals.

Ethnic Puritan?

Asked about his stand on government attempts to promote racial integration by locating low-income housing projects in middle class (i.e. white) suburbs, the former governor replied:

"I see nothing wrong with ethnic purity being maintained. I would not force a racial integration of a neighborhood by government action. But I would not permit discrimination against a family moving into the neighborhoods."

In other words, Carter supports the federal open housing laws passed during the height of the civil rights struggle a decade ago. These laws prohibit a landlord or building owner from refusing to rent or sell accommodations to any individual who meets such objective standards as having sufficient income or credit.

Carter has been apologizing for his reference to "ethnic purity," admitting his choice of words was insensitive, although he stands by the substance of his statement.

While his political rivals for the Democratic nomination can hardly suppress rebel yells of delight over the southerner's gaffe, the reaction of the black community has been mixed.

Undoubtedly, Carter has lost some black votes. But it is too early to judge the final effect.

Many black leaders, especially those backing another candidate, have been harsh in their criticism of his choice of words. Yet there have been few outright defections by those previously committed to support the former governor. Coleman Young, the black mayor of Detroit and a Carter backer, was among those who came to Carter's defence.

He said he has considerable pride in his own predominantly-black neighborhood and understood why other racial and ethnic groups felt the same way about the special identity of their communities.

"This pride is worth preserving as long as people have the right to move in and out," noted the mayor. "That's what I understand Jimmy Carter to have said and that's as American as apple pie."

Carter has demonstrated an easy rapport with blacks that few other white politicians can match, in part because of his progressive racial and social policies as governor. His personality, his upbringing as a Georgia farmboy, and the evangelical southern Baptist religion he espouses also were factors in winning an overwhelming majority of black votes in the primaries so far.

JIMMY CARTER

Indeed, the most serious damage to his campaign may have been done among white liberals, full of racial guilt, who have been looking for a rationale for withholding their support from Carter.

In their campaign to discredit the former governor, Jackson and Udall have been raising political opportunism to a new level.

Expressing himself to be both "shocked and appalled," Jackson has warned that Carter's views on the value of ethnic neighborhoods "will balkanize our country."

The senator seems to have forgotten a position paper on school desegration, issued last December, in which he wrote:

"If we destroy the various ethnic neighborhoods in our cities, including black neighborhoods, we destroy not only a rich tradition in American life, but an anchor of stability in an increasingly unstable society."

It seems unlikely that Jakcson, who invoked this argument to support his stand against "social engineering" (i.e. busing children to achieve racial balance in public schools) that is "antithetical to traditional American views," has changed his mind.

Udall has suggested Carter's reference to "ethnic purity" was a carefully calculated appeal to supporters of George Wallace now that the Alabama governor's campaign has come virtually to a standstill. But he has been more frank than Jackson in admitting he's "not willing to charge in and say to established neighborhoods the federal government is coming in here, friends, and we're going to put high-rise, low-income things in your neighborhood."

Waiting for a Stumble

He has won six of the eight primaries so far, and has a narrow lead in the number of delegates pledged to his support at the natinal convention that will pick a Democratic nominee this July. But he has finished behind Jackson and Udall in two major industrial states: Massachusetts and New York.

The April 27 Pennsylvania primary is shaping up as a possibly decisive showdown for the Democrats. It is a state in which Carter's famous southern charm will have to compete with Jackson's strong appeal to organized labor and urban, white ethnics. Neither can Udall, whose strongest support has been in affluent suburbs, be counted out of the race.

If Carter wins that decisive primary, it would create a momentum that could carry him to victory at the convention. A poor showing would be the green light that Senator Hubert Humphrey has been waiting for to enter the campaign, taking supporters not only from the former governor but Jackson and Udall as well.

It's too early to tell what effect Carter's "ethic purity" slip will have in Pennsylvania. But much depends on how he conducts himself under the heightened pressure any front-runner feels when he stumbles.

TOM WICKER

Communism and Kissinger

NEW YORK — The authorized summary of U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's remarks to American ambassadors in London last December discloses the extraordinary stress he put on his view that "the dominance of communist parties in the West is unacceptable." Yet, there may be a contradition between that strongly held view and a point made on the same occasion by Helmut Sonnenfeldt, one of Kissinger's closest associates.

Sonnenfeldt, in his controversial remarks on Eastern Europe, said that, in that region particularly, "the single most important unifying force is the presence of sheer Soviet military power." Therefore, he concluded, "the main, if not the only, instrument of Soviet imperialism has been power."

Sheer Soviet Power

Recent events underline Sonnenfeldt's point. In Portugal, which "sheer Soviet military power" could not reach, Portuguese communists were unable to seize power even in the chaotic conditions following the overthrow of the old Salazar dictatorship.

In Angola, on the other hand, the Soviets were able to use their Cuban surrogates to exert something like "sheer Soviet military power" in a civil war and assure the victory (which had been likely anyway) of the faction they chose to support. It remains to be seen whether Soviet imperialism can establish itself permanently in Angola on any other basis than that provided by the Cuban expeditionary force.

If Soviet imperialism can be established only where "sheer Soviet military power" is available to support it, Kissinger's extreme opposition to communist parties coming to power in Western countries appears to be out of reasonable proportion.

Soviet military power cannot reach, that is to say, into Italy, France or Spain, as it did not reach into Portugal, unless the Soviet Union wishes to precipitate a general European war.

To take the likeliest eventuality, if the Italian communist party should win a share of power in the next election the Soviet Union will not be able to dominate or control that party or force its continuance in office because it will not be able to use "sheer military power" except by going to war.

This is a situation quite different from that of Czechoslovakia in 1968, when Moscow was able to use Warsaw Pact tanks to crush "socialism with a human face."

It means, for example, that the Italian communist party, even in power, need not necessarily be dominated by Soviet ideology nor subservient to Soviet foreign policy. It is neither of those things now, which is one good reason for its increasing acceptability to Italian voters.

Kissinger sought to deal with this contradition in his London remarks. His opposition, he said, "has nothing to do with the reasonablness of these parties or with the degree of their independence with (sic) Russia." H added that "the extent to which such a party follows the Moscow line is unimportant . . . even the impact of an Italian communist party that seemed to be governing effectively would be devastating on France, and on NATO, too."

That, of course, is the key to Kissinger's opposition. "The growth of left-wing policies threatens to undermine the security relationships and defence policies on which the alliance has been constructed . . . It is difficult to see how we could continue to have NATO discussions if these various communist parties did achieve control of Western European governments."

Somewhat more tentatively, Kissinger said it was "hard to imagine" that a communist party would abide by democratic processes — leave office if it lost an election, for example. But he offered no explanation of how communists would be better able to destroy democracy in Italy, without the help of Soviet military power, than they were in Portugal. And since his concern for "democratic processes" in Greece, Chile, Korea and elsewhere has been sparse, his main point seemed to be that the Western alliance as it is now, could not survive communist parties in, or sharing, power in Western European governments.

Island in Its Values

This concern is more than military. "The Western alliance," Kissinger said, "has always had an importance beyond military security. The United States would be alone and isolated in a world in which he had no relations by values to other countries . . . it could result in a situation where the United States would be an island in its own values . . ."

That fear, if warranted, would certainly justify Kissinger's concern about the strength of communist parties in Western Europe. But is it warranted? Does a mortal threat lie in the doctrine of communism, wherever and however applied, as distinct from the imperialism of the Soviet Union? Above all, is the Western alliance "as it is now" the only acceptable structure for Western security, the only guarantor of American values? And which values does Kissinger mean?

Stay tuned for further discussion.

Discipline Missing

If Dr. McGeer doesn't know the basic reason for school arson and other behavioral problems we are indeed in for a continuation of the same nonsense. It's pretty basic, Mr. Minister, there's an all-important ingredient missing from school curricula and it's called "discipline" — firm but fair. It's also missing from too many homes and without it we'll undoubtedly finish up with a form of state discipline we can all well do without. It's sad but true. You only reap what you sow and the educators know full well what they've been sowing over the last 10 to 15 years.

How can we fault those who are causing Dr. McGeer and society so many problems when we have allowed so-called enlightened educators to fail in preparing students to face outside day to day challenges? — A. J. Broome, Victoria.

Christian Schools

Lavinia Greenwood's letter, in the April 10 issue of your newspaper, presents a most depressing picture of the public school system. I find myself in agreement with much of what she says, but I am not without hope. As a reply to your correspondent I would like to tell something of the Christian school system.

This system does not exist to oppose public schools but rather to provide an alternative that Christian parents can consider for the education of their children.

In a Christian school an endeavor is made to recognize the ability and needs of individual students. No child is regarded as a nuisance no matter how problematic or handicapped. This is facilitated by relatively small schools, low pupil-teacher ratio, and close co-operation between parent and teacher. "Social relationships" are taken care of and teachers manage to prepare lessons without elaborate facilities. Teachers have a rare sense of dedication to quality teaching, are not unionized and do not demand job tenure.

"Moral education," it is said, "is the habitual vision of greatness." Where do we offer that to our average child today? My answer — in the Christian school.

These claims are not made with human perfectibility in mind, but in confidence arising from faith in God the Creator. In confidence that the Bible reveals God's will for his people and provides norms for all areas of life including that of education. And in the confidence that the knowledge of God's love brings to me, I can say in all truth — my hope rests in the Christian school system. — Isabel S. Hedlin, Member, Promotion Committee, Victoria Christian Education Society, Box 4113, Station A, Victoria.

Newsmen Praised

This letter refers to two recent news items. May I write a eulogy? I refer to articles in the Times, April 7, Lung Cancer Claims Senator O'Leary and April 8, News Magnate Sifton Dies.

Both men had great effect on "the Canadian scene," each in his own way — both "newsmen." Grattan O'Leary, I did not know but as a youth his name always intrigued me and still does.

He is one of the few senators who really contributed to our system. (Like MP Stanley Knowles I consider the Senate an expensive extravagance). What I have read about him has always been complimentary.

Clifford Sifton I knew very well and even dated his daughter Anne in 1938 and 1939. The only reason I knew this wonderful Canadian family in Toronto in those years was because the Siftons believed in sending their children to the ordinary schools in Toronto (as opposed to private schools).

I was at Queen's University in 1938 with Clifford Sifton III — a nephew of Clifford Sifton II who has just died at 82 years.

Clifford III was later editor of the Saskatoon Star-Phoenix. He unfortunately died relatively oung, due to a congenital disease, I believe.

The Jewish people have a saying: "All you have in your hands when you die is what you have given away!"

Half-baked Truths

As a casual observer of your editorial page, I couldn't help but notice Mr. Paine's latest outburst against socialism (April 13). As Mr. Paine should know, a decent standard of living doesn't always come with hard work. Many a time this has had to be fought for.

He seems to have little tolerance for facts and finds rationale in broad generalizations and half-baked truths. He states that socialism is a proven failure. Is he saying then that capitalism is an unprecedented success? Why no mention of social democratic governments that have fared reasonably well throughout the world? They are too numerous to mention. Here again he resorts to isolationism to suit preconceived ideas about various governments.

Finally then, what system does he advocate for solving world problems? To be realistic I think is to say no system or institution is perfect, simply because there are human beings operating them. — Rod Arundell, 3500 Quadra Street.

He Keeps Saying The Wrong Things

By LISA HOBBS
The Sun

He is 41, a self-made millionaire, and as handsome and upright as a rosy tulip.

He is Bill Vander Zalm, a former mayor of Surrey and now minister of human resources. To think everything is going perfectly for Vander Zalm, however, would be a mistake. For Mr. Vander Zalm has a rather unusual problem: every time he opens his mouth he sounds as if he were being prompted by Archie Bunker.

Take, for instance, the announcement made shortly after taking office that he "would find ways of dealing with anyone who can work but refuses to pick up the shovel." Or that women were better at home-making than at anything else. Or his latest directive — that assistance would be refused to anyone not conforming to "suitable" dress and grooming. Three stereotyped beliefs — that the poor are lazy, that females are all earth-mothers, and that clothes make the man. Vander Zalm, however, doesn't see the problem in this light.

Sitting on the edge of his green plush armchair in his roomy Victoria office he pleads that he is not insensitive, that he always has spoken in "a controversial way" and is not given to dressing up his thoughts in "fancy rhetoric." The fact is, he says, that the welfare system has been abused by many who don't want to work and the taxpayer has been forced to underwrite them.

Blunt Instrument

This may be the case but the minister's statement tars all the unemployed with the same brush, an essential injustice while thousands diligently seek work daily. It is pointed out that language used without nuance or delicacy can be a blunt and hurtful instrument, particularly when it comes wrapped in the packing of state policy.

Again Vander Zalm protests. His protests are without a trace of anger or bitterness; they spring from a well of painfully-sweet sincerity. The point, obviously, has been missed: Vander Zalm adds that he knows exactly what it's like to go without.

"I was brought up to work hard, not to squander, and if you wanted something you put out. I'm tied in, like it or not, with the old work ethic. But I still object to some people thinking I'm a fascist.

"When I was mayor of Surrey I was seen as left-wing: I was strong on land use, control of development, making developers pay their way. We even had an advisory council that ruled on where the doors should be, the color of the trim and of the houses. Some councillors thought it was socialist, contrary to freedom, but my argument is that individuals sometimes have to give up their rights for the over-all good of the community. So some people see me this way, and others that way."

Blames Aides

Told that in recent weeks the picture that has emerged of the minister is undilutedly right-wing, Vander Zalm still protested he couldn't see why. In fact, he said earnestly, the only time he had any difficulty with his public statements was when advisors had got him to compromise.

"For instance, in the definition of handicapped people, I would have simply said that no more alcoholics would be given the handicapped persons allowance. There are about 50 alcoholics getting it and that's not what it's for. But I was told not to mention the word 'alcoholics' as it would look as if I was coming down on a group of unfortunate people. So I didn't and gave everyone the wrong impression."

Vander Zalm's penchant for saying the wrong thing is, apparently, as entrenched as his pathetic inability to see why it is the wrong thing. Take, for instance, his recent response to the March 22 rally in Victoria when women asked for equal training opportunities with men. He simply opined that women make better homemakers than plumbers or electricians — a tragically insensitive remark in a nation where women comprise nearly 50 per cent of the labor force while occupying nearly 100 per cent of the lowest wage categories.

Nuance Neurotic?

That he remains unaware of his stereotyped views of women became apparent when he was asked if he would influence his daughters. No, he said, they could do as they wished "although if one said she didn't know whether to be an electrician or a music teacher, I would tell her not to be an electrician, that it would be far more suitable for her to be a music teacher."

Will Vander Zalm ever develop an ear for what he is really saying, that the sum total of words strung together can form an undeniable, if unintentional, pattern? It's unlikely: it is as if his own psychological health is so robust, and his material life so full, nuance appears as neurosis. Yet the possibility that Vander Zalm will take his foot out of his mouth and keep it out is there, for the fuss surrounding his statements seems to have precipitated some self-questioning.

"I don't see myself as a political person. There's so much phoniness in politics. I've always said that after I do this job, or that, I'll get out. But I never do. First I was an alderman, then mayor, and now I'm here. There's always something else I want to do. For instance, I'd like to fix up some of the inequities in social assistance.

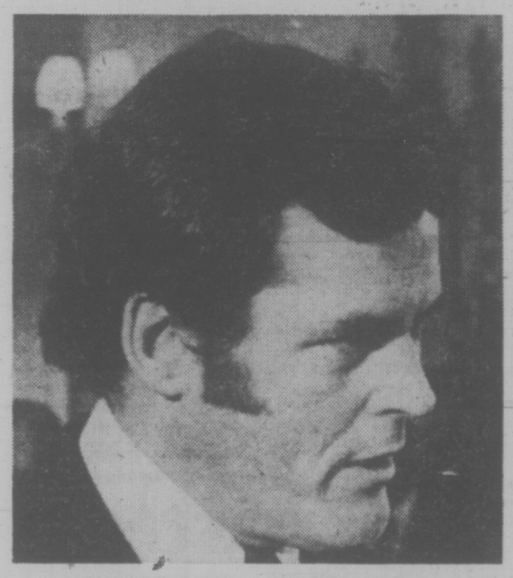
Inner Struggle

"There should be special help for those in their 50s who've lost their jobs. And why should a mother on her own with three children get $370 a month while a couple aged 62 with maybe better means gets $530 a month? Things like this bother me and I end up staying in politics, although I keep on saying I'll get out."

That there is a sizable struggle going on between his roles of husband, father of four teenage children, and elected official there is no doubt. It's a struggle complicated by the fact that his income is from a family business which he had run. Although he gets back to his Surrey home on weekends, it's obviously not enough. This bothers him but he has no solution.

"I put a tennis court in at the back of the house 18 months ago," he says, "but I've never had time to set foot on it."

It's likely Vander Zalm never will. He is highly-motivated, naturally political, and will probably be in Victoria as long as the Socreds are in office. It's to be hoped that somewhere in that time he will grasp the difference between "fancy rhetoric" and a decent sensitivity.



VANDER ZALM . . . blissfully unaware

American Values Taught In Canadian Sociology

TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

Canadian students attending Canadian universities paid for out of Canadian public funds are being taught about the values, institutions and social problems of American, not Canadian society.

The reason for this shocking state of affairs is simple: Canadian universities are dominated by American sociologists, so much so that the study of Canadian society is almost non-existent. The extent of American domination of Canadian sociology was recently documented in a sweeping report on Canadian studies prepared by Thomas Symons, former president of Trent University and chairman of a special task force set up by the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada.

★ ★ ★

In spite of this situation, and the growing number of Canadian sociologists who need jobs, University of Toronto's Scarborough College has been interviewing American candidates for sociology teaching posts. Only four of the 11 professors teaching sociology at Scarborough are Canadian.

It took a protest from graduate sociology students to force the university to reconsider its hiring plans.

It is hard to understand why the university, hard on the heels of the publication of the Symons report, could be so insensitive to the urgent need to put more emphasis on Canadian studies.

Sociology is an important social science. It covers the study of society itself—the family, social values and behavior, immigrants and their adaptation to Canadian society, juvenile delinquency, French-English relations, problems of native peoples, violence, to name just a few elements of the field.

The Symons report found, though, that sociology professors tended to avoid studies that did not fit into the American framework.

"Some courses on race relations and cultural pluralism, for example, ignore French-English relations, Canadian multiculturalism, and the native peoples of this country and focus instead on analyses of race and ethnic relations in the United States. Other courses on urban and rural sociology, on the family, on industrial relations, on demography and migration patterns and even on regional studies rely almost exclusively upon American literature and American examples," Symons found.

Symons spoke to American sociologists working in Canadian universities who told him they would not hire Canadians because "once one hires a few then they will be pushing for more and more." Yet a sociology dominated by American scholars and American perspectives contributes little to an understanding of Canadian society and its problems. Canadian society is different from U.S. society, and Canada cannot be fitted into the American mould.

As Symons summed it up, "There is, indeed, a real danger that sociology" as a field of scholarship in Canada "will become so oriented to American interests, values, methodologies and research priorities that it can no longer effectively serve the academic and social interests of this country."

The experience at Scarborough's sociology department underlines the need for universities everywhere in Canada to take a hard look at just how well they are serving Canadian needs and interests.

The purpose of Canadian studies is not to promote a narrow, isolationist view that rejects the great fund of knowledge, experience and heritage available from the rest of the world. But there must be a balance. And what the Symons report found, in sociology and other areas of knowledge, is that the balance has tipped so far away from Canadian studies they scarcely exist.

Yet as the Symons report pointed out, "The most valid and compelling argument for Canadian studies is the importance of self knowledge, the need to know and understand ourselves: Who we are; where we are in time and space; where we have been; where we are going; what we possess; what our responsibilities are to ourselves and to others."

Canadian universities must stop shirking that task.

THE GLOBE AND MAIL

Among the more notable passive recipients of the creature comforts of this world, we have Environment Minister Jean Marchand, who seems almost endearingly bowled over by the extraordinary expenses incurred in the redecoration and furnishings of his two offices when he was Transport Minister.

One, in the Transport building, swallowed up $44,000 in such delightful features as a private kitchen and shower, an $1,800 built-in bookcase, and $900 worth of plants; the other, Mr. Marchand's office on Parliament Hill, allows one to sink into one of four $1,100 armchairs, and was made presentable for a mere $10,275 in furnishings.

Mr. Marchand protests that he never asked for this sort of treatment.

The big question that arises is this: If luxury was thrust upon an unwilling Mr. Marchand, who (or what) did the thrusting?

Of Names and the News

Julie Eisenhower (born Nixon) denies her father ever got so crazy he said good night to portraits of dead presidents;

Lucille Ball and Desi Arnez were married and divorced not once but twice;

A novel called the Inspector's Opinion offers a British inspector's opinion of what happened the night Teddy Kennedy and Mary Jo Kopechne went for a drive at Chappaquiddick;

★ ★ ★

The hottest seller among new jigsaw puzzles based on old movie posters features U.S. presidential hopeful Ronald Reagan in a film called Accidents Will Happen;

Hubert Humphrey once described the bullpen in Tiger Stadium, Detroit, as "inhuman" because it was sunk so low the players out there had to stand up to watch the game;

Patty Hearst's adventures inspire the production of quickie paperbacks, an off-Broadway musical, a straight film, and a porno-flick in which the heroine does erotic things with a big snake;

Bette Midler, tongue in cheek, says she, too, slept with John Fitzgerald Kennedy; and, last but far from least, Jackie Kennedy wrote a script for a television documentary. It wasn't much good. The show was never produced. That was about 24 years ago. Now it can be told.

Okay? I'll repeat the question. Which section of what magazine printed all that stuff in the past four months? What's that, sir? You say, "The People section of 'Canada's Newsmagazine,' the People pages of Cahada's very own supernew Maclean's magazine"?

To be fair, there's certainly more to Maclean's than its People section; and, even here, it does include a smattering of Canadians. Back in the February 9 issue — a record-breaker for Canadian content under People — we got four items with at least some Canadian flavor:

★ ★ ★

The prime minister of the Bahamas bought Olympic lottery tickets at Toronto airport; under pressure from Cartier of New York to change the name of his jewelry shop, the proprietor of Bijouterie Cartier de Montreal, said no; Malcom Bricklin, the American founder of New Brunswick's abortive auto-making industry, resurfaced in Arizona; Charlotte Gobeil, Ottawa newsperson, asked some embarrassing questions at a press conference. Her victim? Teddy Kennedy.

The Canadian stuff in Maclean's People section tends to be like that. We hear about two Toronto newspapermen because, gosh, they've just interviewed Raquel Welch. On the whole, the section suggests either that Maclean's doesn't believe there's any such species as interesting Canadians, or that its owners won't give staff enough money to unearth them.

Now I don't find any of this deeply reprehensible on the part of the staff editors. If I were one of them (which, as it happens, I used to be), I might well find myself pouring over American wire copy in search of the perfect tidbit from Washington or Los Angeles, which I might then whack into shape for the People page.

And I'm familiar with the hoary professional and commercial justification for giving better play to big American names than to medium-sized Canadian names: the editor's job is to give his readers what his expert hunch tells him they want most.

It's not his fault if Canadians would rather read People items about Burton-Taylor than about, say, the mayor of some Prairie town. Well, is it? His not to reason why, his but to sell papers or die. And you sell 'em better with celebs, with the big names the great unwashed already know.

That's why it was that, in newspapers across Canada recently, the death of Howard Hughes was front-page news. Wilder Penfield died the same day, of course. He had merely founded one of the world's most famous centres for brain surgery. He was merely one of the greatest medical scientists of the century. He was merely a Canadian. In the newspapers I saw, you had to turn inside to find out that, just like Howard Hughes, he had passed over to the other side.

If names make the news, maybe it's also worth remembering that news makes the names.

Beatles Make It Back to Top 10

LONDON — The Beatles are again dominating the British popular music scene, six years after the rock group disbanded. As a result of re-releases by the group's record company, EMI, they now have 23 records on Britain's top 100 chart. Four of them are in the top 30. Yesterday, a song the group recorded seven years ago, is currently No. 10 and industry spokesmen have said it might easily reach No. 1.

LONDON — Soraya the belly dancer was wriggled her way in the Guinness Book of Records by dancing for 31 hours, one minute and 10 seconds. The performance, which ended Monday, left her 11 pounds lighter and $9,250 richer. Soraya, a British citizen of Turkish origin, decided to tackle the job after Joseph Mourat, the owner of a Turkish restaurant where she works, agreed to pay her $18.50 for every minute she danced beyond the old record. When she started everyone thought the old record was six hours, but Guinness representatives later said there was a claimant to a record of 27 hours.

BANGKOK — Seni Pramoj was named today to replace his younger brother Kukrit Pramoj as premier of Thailand. Seni was chosen — as expected — at a meeting of leaders of the four conservative parties which will make up his coalition administration. Seni served briefly as premier at the end of the Second World War and again last year.

SYDNEY — Liberace, the U.S. pianist whose sparkling stage clothes have become his trademark, today denied reports he would marry a former Louisiana beauty queen. The reports had said Liberace would marry 23-year-old Debbie Robet, who will appear with him on his current tour of Australia. The 56-year-old Liberace told reporters: "I don't think I'm the marrying kind."

NEW YORK — The Walters Watch continues at NBC.

The co-host of the Today Show is scheduled to have lunch today with top officials of the network in an effort to decide whether she will sign a new contract with NBC or move to ABC where she has been promised a co-anchor job with Harry Reasoner on the ABC Evening News. In a telephone interview Monday, Walters said she has not yet decided which of the two offers to accept. NBC is anxious ofar decision one way or the other, for many reasons — among them a meeting of the NBC Affiliation Board Wednesday when network officials will be asked the future of both Walters and the Today Show. If Walters does decide to take the ABC offer, present plans are for Betty Furness to fill in until a permanent replacement can be found. It was also learned Monday that NBC News has been talking to Bill Moyers about the possibility of joining its news staff, possibly on the Today Show. Just what role he would play on the show is contingent of whether Walters stays or leaves.

Red Cord Slaying Of Famed Decorator

NEW YORK — Michael Greer, the internationally known interior designer who helped Jacqueline Kennedy redecorate the White House, was found dead Monday.

His body, clad only in a blue kimono and with the feet bound by a red cord, was found lying face up on a bed in his Park Avenue apartment.

There is immediate speculation among frineds that a "jealous lover" may have been involved in the crime.

Police said there were no signs of forced entry at the door which has a spring lock and a bolt lock.

There were no signs of violence.

Police said there were marks on the body, but declined to say where.

They also declined to call the case a homicide immediately, but listed it as "suspicious death."

Mills said his wife had gone ot the apartment because the couple was worried that Greer had not kept a Sunday dinner appointment and to make final arrangements for a Monday afternoon birthday party for the couple's eight-year-old son.

"She called me and said she'd looked in the door," Mills told reporters.

ELVIS PROPOSAL: WAS IT A HOAX?

ATHENS, Ala. — Hadean Tribble arrived at the church on time but Elvis Presley did not show up.

Now she says she was the victim of a hoax and was humiliated by a wedding that never took place.

"I definitely had a joke played on me, it seems," said Mrs. Tribble, a 44-year-old widow with four adult children.

"It seems like there was a misunderstanding a long time ago and I've just been used and humiliated."

Tribble said she received telephone calls and met several times "with some person I thought was Elivs."

"If Mr. Presley says it wasn't him, it had to be someone pretending to be him," she said in an interview after her wedding preparations fell through.

"He's the only one that knows whether he made any proposals to me, or any telephone calls or any visits to me," she said.

Her matrimonial plans began last November when she resigned her job at Decatur, Ala., telling a friend Judy Maner she was going to marry a famous person.

STEVIE'S $13 MILLION WONDER-DEAL: The $13 million contract Stevie Wonder supposedly signed with Motown Records last winter may not be valid.

"The press release went out," said a Wonder publicist, "but he never signed the contract."

Chris Jones, Wonder's manager, confirmed that "there is no new contract with Motown at this time." Epic and Arista Records are reportedly in hot pursuit of Wonder's John Hancock.

Motown officials weren't talking, but their fortunes have not exactly tailspinned.

Those who've heard Songs in the Key of Life, Stevie's Taurus release for them, say that it's another Talking Book.

Meanwhile, Wonder has written a song with James Taylor for Taylor's next LP, "In the Pocket."

Peter Asher, Taylor's manager, reports that Don't Be Sad, came about because of a "mutual admiration between the two men."

ONE FOR YOU, 19 FOR ME: Latest British rockers to flee the Taxman's high tariffs are Emerson, Lake and Palmer.

According to their publicist, the group will live in Switzerland while rehearsing for their world tour, then switch to Nassau for their U.S. swing. The group join all the Rolling Stones (Wyman and Watts live in France, Richard in Switzerland, Jagger wherever), John Lennon and numerous other refugees from a tax rate which can reach as high as 98 per cent.

According to Bill Wyman of the Stones, "It was impossible to stay in England. I don't earn enough money to be able to have 98 per cent of it taken away and still be able to live."

The complex laws make England the most dangerous place a British rocker can stay during his "year out." Last year, Robert Plant (who lives on the Isle of Jersey for tax purposes) was lifted out of a hospital room by a crane so he could leave the country, leg-in-a-cast-and-all, before re-establishing residency.

And Rod Stewart (who lives in L.A.) once refused to leave an airplane diverted from Dublin to London, on the grounds that it could lead to a $100,000 misunderstanding.

Not every British rocker is ready to move across the sea. Elton John has repeatedly announced his intention to stick it out. And Yes manager Brian Lane says that "America's nice and we like it here, but basically we think it's a nice place to come home from."

★ ★ ★

"FOR A FEW SECONDS I thought it was me. Then I realized that I don't have a pair of white-rimmed sunglasses." Ian Hunter was describing how he'd emerged from the Roxy in Los Angeles and spotted a poster for French rocker Michel Polnareff hanging across the street.

Same curly hair, same large nose, same sculpted chin and thin lips. "Then I read the copy on the poster, and it said, 'Michel Polnareff, All-American!' Well, my new album is called 'All-American Alien Boy.' That really confused me."

At first Hunter was huffy: "I feel I've been invaded on a bit." Then he cooled out.

"It's free advertising. I'd just like it known that I'm the real one."

Then again, when Polnareff was asked about the resemblance, he simply replied, "Ian 'unter? Who eez 'e?"

Leon and gospel singer Mary McCreary tied the knot in a ceremony at Willie Nelson's Austin home, where Willie and his wife served as the only witnesses.

The album, on which Leon and Mary share vocals, is the first for his new Paradise label (distributed by Warners).

PORT'S DUST BLAMED FOR BLOODY COUGHS

VANCOUVER (CP) — A spokesman for the International Longshoremen's Union said Monday that a crushed lime rock surface at the city's new $10 million container-cargo terminal is causing workers to get nosebleeds and to cough up blood.

Don Lanoville, local head of the union, said the surface throws up a fine, choking dust over the entire 76-acre terminal area.

"On particularly bad days, men operating big four-wheeled loaders can't even see where they're going because of the dust," said Lanoville.

He said that when the terminal was built "engineers had a theory the stuff would set in time and become as hard as granite."

"Obviously that's not happening," said. "Somebody made a mistake — and I bet it's a multi-million dollar mistake, too."

Port Manager Bo Ekstrom said resurfacing at the site is tentatively scheduled to begin next week. He would not disclose the cost of the project.

The terminal was officially opened in February.

Giving Away Chickens Called Foolish Gesture

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of the British Columbia Egg Marketing Board said Monday that dissident northern egg producers would be foolish to sell or give away their chickens because of their dispute with the board.

Bill Janzen said the board hopes that the lengthy fight between five Prince George area producers and the board will end following last week's B.C. Supreme Court order directing the producers to comply with board policies.

Arnold Link, one of the five northern producers, said during the weekend that he would give his chickens away if the ruling is not overturned.

Link first said that he would destroy his chickens, but changed his mind "because there is such a shortage of food."

Janzen said that "it would be foolish for them (the producers) to sell or give away their chickens because their farms would be virtually worthless without that production."

Janzen denied the producers' charge that the quota of eggs they are allowed to market is unfairly restricted by the board and that surplus Fraser Valley eggs are dumped on northern markets.

He said that the board has allowed increased production in the northern interior to keep pace with population increase and that the board would not give increased quotas to producers who are already at the maximum allowed.

Board regulations allow producers a maximum of 200 cases — 600 dozen eggs — a week. Janzen said three of the interior producers have the maximum quota.

YEAR-OLD CORPSE FOUND IN SHACK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said the skeletal remains of what is believed to be a 76-year-old man were found Monday in a single-level, boarded-up house in the south-east area of the city.

Police said the man may have been dead for more than a year.

The remains were discovered by neighborhood children who tore some plywood from the door and entered the house.

Police believed they knew the man's identity by mail found at the scene, but were attempting to make positive identification today.

A police spokesman said the six-room dwelling was so littered with items the man had collected, that police had to literally shovel their way through the house.

Foul play is not suspected.

CN Bridge Nearly Back

VANCOUVER (CP) — A railway bridge in nearby New Westminster, damaged last Dec. 26 when it was struck by a runaway river barge, will be back in service by Saturday, a Canadian National Railways spokesman said Monday.

William Jansen, CN project co-ordinator, said the bridge repair work was four weeks ahead of schedule.

Jansen said Dominion Bridge Ltd. made finishing touches to the new 380-foot span during the weekend. He said the span will be floated on barges, manoeuvered into position, and secured Tuesday and Wednesday, and, after final securing and testing, rail traffic will resume.

CN is the principal user of the Public Works Canada bridge and is responsible for maintenance and repair of the structure.

Donald Pudney, a spokesman for Dominion Bridge, said four weeks was saved because CN's engineering consultant, Hans Zimmerling of Fenco, was able to modify the span design.

Total cost of the project was $3 million.

Job Finders by June

VANCOUVER (CP) — The provincial government hopes to have its job-finding program for employable welfare recipients operating by June, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

He said in a telephone interview from his Surrey home that the program initially will be aimed at about 20,000 persons classed as easily-employed.

He said 30 or 40 job-finders will be hired throughout British Columbia as part of the first-stage of a four-level program.

Vander Zalm described the second phase as job training, the third as job counselling and training primarily aimed at handicapped persons and with a help-yourself theme, and the fourth step as job creation.

The minister said this fourth phase will be a longer-range program with federal involvement aimed especially at developing industries in depressed areas of the province.

He said that federal Manpower Minister Robert Andras was "very receptive" to provincial proposals outlined in a meeting between the two men last Thursday, and a "good line of communication" has been established on the matter.

Vander Zalm said a more detailed outline of the program probably will be released in two weeks.

Violence Threat 'Serious'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The violence threatened by native people if a pipeline is built in the Northwest Territories before their land claims are settled should be taken seriously by southern Canadians, Mr. Justice Berger said Monday.

Appearing on the debut of the national CBC television show, 90 Minutes Live, the British Columbia supreme court judge, who heads the inquiry on the proposed mackenzie Valley gas and oil pipelines, said the land claim plea is one he is taking into account before making recommendations.

He added that the land claims settlement is one of many issues that the government and all Canadians should consider before a final decision on pipeline construction is made.

After host Peter Gzowski read a letter in which a native person threatened to blow the proposed pipeline up, Mr. Justice Berger said: "These are obviously serious people and these are the kind of things we all have to take into account."

He has completed formal hearings in Yellowknife, Inuvik and Whitehorse as well as 28 other northern communities and will launch a southern tour starting May 11 in Vancouver.

"I think that the references being made to the violence indicate how strongly people feel about the issue," Mr. Justice Berger said later.

"I think people in the south look at more than the references to the violence. The native people have been talking to the inquiry for a year now. I think we should all be listening to all of the things they are saying about their hopes, their fears and their future," he said.

He said the commission, which is to make recommendations on the social economic and environmental impact of the pipelines proposed by Canadian Arctic Gas and Foothills Pipelines Ltd. while leaving the final decision on contruction to the National Energy Board, will not be presented by developments such as the recent federal decision to allow two oil wells to be drilled in the Beaufort Sea.

Summer Break in Drug Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — The principals in a $10,000-a-day preliminary hearing into drug conspiracy charges against 19 men will take a three-month summer vacation, the presiding judge announced Monday.

In announcing that the hearing will adjourn on May 16 until August 16, Provincial Court Judge John Davies said "it is only fair to allow counsel to have holidays like everyone else."

Judge Davies said the hearing, which opened Jan. 15, was originally scheduled to last four months, but unforseen circumstances have increased the period to at least one year.

The preliminary hearing into heroin conspiracy charges has had several shaky and false starts since it began.

The cost of the hearing, borne mostly by the taxpayer at an estimate by court officials at $7,000 to $10,000 a day, has been increased by each delay.

The day after the hearing opened, the Crown replaced its own counsel with another lawyer which made necessary a three-week adjournment to allow the new lawyer to familiarize himself with the case.

On two other days, Judge Davies was forced to adjourn the hearing for several hours because lawyers and defendants were late attending court.

One lawyer dropped out of the hearing in February after saying he could not afford to work for the legal aid rates.

His departure left eight defence lawyers, of which all but one are being paid the legal aid schedule of $700 a day for the first client and an additional $50 a day for every other client in the same case.

TOWBOAT PACT SET

VANCOUVER (CP) — A contract affecting about 1,600 workers in the British Columbia towboat industry should be signed by the end of the week, Captain Maury Sjoquist said Monday.

Sjoquist, assistant secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild, said union executive boards have approved the federal Anti-Inflation Board's request for a one per cent rollback and no membership ratification was needed.

The guild, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers, and the Seafarers International Union representing union workers, and the Council of Marine Carriers, representing the employers', told the board last week that they would conform with the board's rollback request in the two-year agreement.

Sjoquist said the contract now gives a wage and benefit increase of about 29 per cent.

He said deck hands will receive an increase of 85 cents an hour in the first year and 82 cents an hour in the second year on the previous base rate of $5.56 an hour.

Sjoquist said officers represented by the Guild will receive an increase of 13 per cent in the first year and 11.5 per cent in the second. He said the lowest paid mates will receive $1,348 a month by the end of the contract and the highest-paid master will receive $2,100 a month.

The contract expires Oct. 1, 1977.

The unions and the companies said the one per cent rollback will come about through delaying an overtime clause until Oct. 1 this year. The workers will receive double time after one hour overtime after that date.

NUN TO SPEAK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mother Teresa, a Roman Catholic nun, who for 27 years has worked with people in slums of Calcutta, will open a special session for handicapped people at Habitat Forum May 31.

The 65-year-old Albanian-born nun, whose seamed face made the cover of Time Magazine last December, will make the opening statement on the first of two afternoon sessions for the handicapped.

Losses Exceeded Gains in '75

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Production sagged in all the major resource areas: lumber, newsprint, copper, oil and natural gas.

Factory shipments during 1975 were worth $7 billion, down from $7.1 billion in 1974, despite price increases for most products.

The statistics were released Monday by the provincial department of economic development.

Lumber production totalled 7.46 million board feet, down 14.8 per cent from 8.76 million board feet the previous year. Paper production fell 25 per cent to 1.6 million tons while pulp was down 25.5 per cent to 4.3 million tons.

Copper shipments fell 7.5 per cent to 577 million pounds. December shipments were low, reaching only 51 million pounds, down 34.4 per cent from the previous December.

Production of crude oil and natural gas continued to decline during 1975. Oil production fell 24.2 per cent to 14.2 million barrels. Natural gas prices were up but production slipped 3.1 per cent to just under 400 billion cubic feet.

There were some strengths in the economy, however. Retail sales were strong all year. At the end of November, B.C. retail sales totalled $5.3 billion, up 10 per cent. Statistics were not available for December but merchants in Victoria and Vancouver reported Christmas business up between 15 and 18 per cent over the previous December.

Housing starts also showed improvement in 1975—and continue to be strong this year. Across B.C. in 1975 there were 26,569 starts, up 12.5 per cent from 23,615 in 1974. Completions during the year fell 2.3 per cent to 25,924, however.

One important resource to show vigor in 1975 was coal where tonnages and prices were both up from 1974. B.C. exported 10.5 million tons of coal to Japan, France and Denmark, up almost 30 per cent from 8.1 million tons the previous year. In 1976 markets are being expanded to Italy and Korea as well. Prices continue to edge upwards.

Exports showed a mixed trend during 1975. Vancouver handled 32.4 million tons of export cargo, down 9.7 per cent.

The dollar value of exports from B.C. ports was up slightly at $6.3 million, from $6.2 million, due to higher prices for natural gas (exported to Washington State) and strong prices for coal.

Farm cash receipts to the end of November totalled $357.7 million, up 6.7 per cent from $335.3 million; but have declined since that time. January receipts hit $30.8 million, down 5.8 per cent from $32.7 million the previous January.

Lead and zinc were both up from the previous year but are of relatively minor importance among B.C. resources.

Production of lead was up 27.6 per cent to 156 million pounds in 1975 while zinc production rose 20.6 per cent to 215 million pounds.

Other items on the down side were: molybdenum shipments down 6 per cent to 29 million pounds; fish landings down 28.8 per cent to $71 million and plywood production (to the end of November) down 5.6 per cent to 1.6 billion square feet.

In addition to the central economic activities, the department of economic development noted that the value of cheques cashed in B.C. during the year totalled $163.9 billion, up 23 per cent from 1974. Life insurance sales in the province rose 28.5 per cent to $2.1 billion and gasoline consumption during 1975 totalled 821.9 million gallons, up 4.6 per cent.

Generation of electricity during the year was down 3.5 per cent to 34.3 billion kilowatt hours and number of U.S. vehicle entries totalled 1 million during the year, down four per cent.

Westcoast Seeks Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd. reports it has filed with the National Energy Board an amendment to the contract between Westcoast and the British Columbia Petroleum Corporation.

As a result of negotiations with the petroleum corporation, the rate of return on Westcoast's rate base will be raised from the 10 per cent established in January, 1975, to 10.5 per cent.

The increase is subject to review by the National Energy Board.

Oil Exploration Incentive Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Federal and provincial governments should redirect their tax policies to encourage the discovery and development of oil and gas, says a Toronto Dominion Bank research paper.

In the current issue of Business and Economics the paper, prepared by bank economist Peter Drake, says a continuation of the gradual adjustment of the Canadian oil price to world levels "through continuing federal and provincial cooperation is in the over-all economic interest."

"It is most discouraging to realize that even if Canadian crude prices rose immediately by $4 per barrel to world prices, less than 25 per cent of the increase would flow to the private sector of the economy while at least 75 per cent would flow to governments."

Governments could ease the translation to higher oil and gas prices and encourage increased exploration and development of oil and gas "by accepting a smaller proportion of oil and gas revenues, provided that the funds foregone by governments are used for exploration purposes."

The paper said that while substantial increases in the price of oil would have an adverse effect on both inflation and economic growth, it would be in the best interest of the major oil-and gas-producing provinces "whose energy resources have begun to shrink."

NOW, THREE MORE MAJOR CONCERNS ARE CONVERTING TO OLIVETTI ACCOUNTING SYSTEMS.

50 for a Bank, 11 for a Department Store, 110 for a Provincial Government Agency. And here's why.

They are the latest to see and be impressed by our accounting systems. Some of the things they saw and learned appear in this advertisement. If you go through them now, you will begin to understand why, all of a sudden, people who are using accounting systems are looking up to Olivetti.

The A-4 is a new, programmable, electronic numeric accounting machine which combines the compactness of an office machine with the ability to be used as a calculator, even during the running of the programme.

It's the lowest cost general purpose machine for:
• Accounts receivable/payable
• Stock control • Invoicing
• Banking applications
• Data collection (with cassettes or paper tape)

The A-5 is a new accounting/invoicing system, one of the most successful electronic systems ever introduced in the market. Over 20,000 units sold world-wide in its first year. Modular in concept and design, the A-5 grows to suit your requirements.

• Accounting • Invoicing
• Payroll • Geheral ledge
• On-line communications

Then, with peripheral equipment it can perform the more complex functions of a medium level accounting system.

The A-5 offers untold expansion potential at any time in the field. Expansion of memory and capability via internal modules and via external peripherals such as magnetic tape cassettes, magnetic ledger cards, paper tape, floppy disc, etc.

Add t. this a coast-to-coast branch network that provides expert sales, software and service support and now you know some of the reasons why we say, now everyone is looking up to our accounting systems. If you need one or a hundred, perhaps you should take a look. Call 383-8621 for a no-obligation demonstration.

Wage Rush Warning

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The federal government's guidelines program, despite the best efforts of the Anti-Inflation Board, is bound to introduce some serious distortions into wage and fringe benefit structures, Labor Minister John Munro warned over the Easter weekend.

"When controls are lifted, there could be a mad rush to catch up that would undo much of the good results we hope will emanate from the anti-inflation program," he said in an address to the Sault Ste. Marie and District Credit Union.

He appealed to the labor movement to exercise its responsibility to make a contribution to the public debate on the formulation of any post control measures that may be necessary.

Canada established the unenviable record in 1974 and again in 1975 of experiencing among the highest man hour losses due to industrial disputes in the western countries, he said.

The minister listed three priorities for action.

First, to continue to strive to reduce the adversary element in labor-management relations. He believed many had lost confidence in collective bargaining and detected among the public a growing admiration of what other countries such as Scandinavia and West Germany are doing.

A start was made last year with the tripartite Canada Labor Relations Council. That has been interrupted by the withdrawal of the Canadian Labor Council in a protest over the operations of the Anti-Inflation Board. Progress will therefore be slowed down.

The second priority is to keep open the lines of communication between the labor movement and government as well as between employers and labor and employers and government, on measures needed to enable a smooth transition into the post-control period, said the minister.

The third priority, and it may be the most difficult, is to devise new approaches which will ensure that all members of the work force, unorganized as well as organized, will be heard when public policy is drafted and programs initiated.

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

HUA RAPS U.S., SOVIETS

TOKYO (AP) — Premier Hua Kuo-feng denounced United States and Soviet policy in the Middle East in his first public address since becoming premier and first vice-chairman of the Chinese Communist party.

"The true colors of the superpowers have been further exposed in their aggression and their contention for hegemony in this region, and they are being more discredited and find the going tougher and tougher," Hua said Monday night at a banquet in Peking honoring Egyptian Vice-President Hosni Mobarak.

Hua said Egypt and other Arab countries "used oil as a weapon and dealt heavy blows at Israeli Zionism and its supporter and abettor—the hegemonism of the superpowers" — in the 1973 war.

Referring to the Soviet Union as "that ruthless and wicked superpower," he said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's recent termination of the Soviet-Egyptian treaty of friendship and cooperation was "a courageous and determined action" which set "a brilliant example for the people of the Third World."

Sadat said he cancelled the treaty because the Soviet government refused to supply him with new arms unless he reversed his pro-U.S. policy. The Soviet refusal sent Sadat to the Chinese, who have agreed to supply him engines and spare parts for the MiG jet fighters he got from Russia. Now Egypt is shopping for other arms.

Solar Energy Subsidy Urged by Architect

OTTAWA (CP) — The government should subsidize consumers who conserve fuel by installing energy equipment in their homes, says Ottawa architect Michael Glover.

Glover said in a recent article that direct low-interest loans or tax concessions to those who equip their homes with solar heating devices would spur Canadian manufacturers to invest money in development of good equipment.

This would be better than the large-scale demonstration project proposed in a yet-unpublished Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. (CMHC) paper, Glover said in the latest issue of Housing and People.

Housing and People is published by the Canadian Council on Social Development.

"Rather than channel all available funds into one single massive project of dubious merit, I suggest CMHC should assist the numerous small-scale initiatives that now are taking place throughout the country," said Glover.

The money spent would be small compared to the larger sums spent on research and development of nuclear energy.

The Ottawa architect and consultant said in a Monday interview that medium-performance equipment should be available for $5,000 to $7,000 a unit in another two years.

A medium-performance unit could provide a house with 60 per cent to 70 per cent of its heating.

Because of the danger of shrinking oil supplies in the future, society must turn to alternative sources of energy, he said.

The Ottawa architect talked of the "autonomous house" which could operate on its own sources of energy. Such a house could depend entirely on solar energy or could supplement solar heat with other forms of power.

For example, combination stoves fueled by rubbish or wood might back up solar units.

Glover said an unpublished CMHC report argues that before private industry moves into the solar energy field in a big way, a demonstration project will have to be launched. The report recommended trying it out in a project of several hundred housing units.

But there is "no need for a large-scale manufacturing and installation operation," he said. Individual components could be assembled by small sub-contractors or by home-owners themselves.

A better way to encourage development and installation of solar equipment was through direct loans or tax concessions to homeowners.

Glover said citizens' groups should be asked to outline what they want solar energy to do. Private industry then could build equipment to meet these guides.

Counselling Centre Roles Show Steady Expansion

Figures released by the Greater Victoria Citizens' Counselling Centre this month, in its ninth year, show a marked expansion in the centre's programs.

In 1975, 422 clients were helped, compared to 243 in 1973. A totoal of 1997 counselling sessions was held compared to 811 in 1973 and 5,215 phone calls handled, a marked growth from the 3,217 received in 1973.

The number of hours spent in support groups has risen from 6,300 last year to 10,030 hours this year.

The centre is jointly financed by the provincial government, awards from the Koerner Foundation and the United Church of Canada.

A new transition group, with paricipants being helped to work through a transition in their life starts in May. It will be held Friday morning in the ladies' parlor of the Metropolitan United Church, beginning May 14.

Assertiveness training groups for both men and women — group discussions in which members identify their usual attitudes and how they wish to change them — will also begin in the week of May 10.

Growth support groups, designed to provide increased communication, trust and friendship among the members, will also begin that week, afternoon and evening sessions being planned.

A small growth support group is also now under way on Pender Island.

Airline Pilots Butting Smokes

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Seventy-six commercial airline pilots backed by Ralph Nader asked the government today to ban smoking in airline cockpits and to forbid pilots and crewmembers from smoking for eight hours before flight time.

In a petition filed with the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration the pilots claimed that exposure to carbon monoxide, a smoking by-product, impairs "vital brain and nervous system functions" and raises questions about the safe operation of the aircraft.

The petition was filed by the Airline Pilots Committee of 76, who said they work for Eastern, United, Continental, Delta, Braniff, Pan American and National.

Joining in the action were the Health Research Group, a part of Nader's Public Citizen Inc., and the Aviation Consumer Action project.

Carbon monoxide, when inhaled, combines with red blood cells to produce CoHb, which in turn reduces the blood's oxygen carrying capacity, they said.

"When combined with the effects of altitude, the increased level of CoHb in the bloodstream that results from even light to moderate smoking adversely affects visual acuity, brightness perception, concentration, manual dexterity and co-ordination and the ability to make judgments under stress such as may occur during flight time," the petition said.

It also claimed that the impact of smoking persists "for many hours after smoking activity has ceased," thus necessitating the requested eight-hour pre-flight ban on smoking by pilots, flight engineers and fligh navigators.

Benzene Effects Kill 10

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Seven Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. employees exposed to a toxic chemical during a 10-year period died of leukemia and related diseases, Akron Beacon Journal says.

The newspaper said in a copyright article today that the deaths, representing a mortality rate more than 250 times greater than normal, were related to exposure to benzene, which is used in the manufacture of shoes and paint thinner.

Investigators from the National Institute for Occupational Safety will examine death records of all employees who worked in the firm's pliofilm department in the Goodyear Aerospace centre here, the newspaper said.

F. Vincent Prus, Goodyear's vice-president for manufacturing, said seven deaths in 10 years from leukemia-related diseases is unusual.

"It sounds as suspicious as hell," he said. "If I thought for one moment that there was any risk in the use of benzol, we would go out of that business."

Benzol is another name for benzene, a petroleum byproduct. The newspaper said that exposure to benzene has been linked to cases of leukemia since 1897.

There are no federal standards for using benzene in industry, the newspaper said, but factories using benzene must comply with environmental regulations which limit exposure.

Robert Lane, vice-president for public relations at Goodyear, said the firm maintains a similar plant at St. Marys, Ohio. But he said a search of medical records over a 36-year period did not uncover cases of leukemia deaths in that plant.

Some Long-Time Backers Quitting Reagan Drive

By LOU CANNON
Washington Post

SACRAMENTO—At least 60 former appointees of key political supporters of ex-California Gov. Ronald Reagan have turned against him and are backing President Ford.

They give varying reasons for their decisions but the dominant one is that they consider Reagan unqualified to be president.

A number of his former supporters also say that Reagan's nomination over an incumbent president would leave the Republican Party too divided to have a chance of retaining the White House in November.

The list of former Reagan supporters who have switched their allegiance includes major financial backers of his 1966 and 1970 gubernatorial campaigns, former cabinet officials and political strategists.

Many of these people share Reagan's political viewpoints and regard him as an effective spokesman for conservative ideas.

Some are close to Reagan personally.

Almost all of them say they respect him as a human being.

But the recurring opinion of more than a score of former Reaganites who were interviewed by The Washington Post was that Reagan is a spokesman, at best an inspirational leader, who has difficulty involving himself in the day-to-day world of government and politics and who lacks either the persistence or the stamina required by a round-the-clock presidency.

"If you load the gun for Reagan, he shoots it pretty good," says David James, a wealthy member of a Los Angeles accounting firm and Reagan's Southern California chairman in 1970.

"But his talents are not suited to the management of great enterprises."

Along with many who have worked closely with Reagan in political situations, James is critical of the governor's tendency to rely on a small cadre of staff aides rather than a wide assortment of politically experienced people.

Some who have worked with Reagan see this tendency as a reflection of Reagan's inherent distaste for the give-and-take of politics.

"A lot of people have tried to say it is the staff around Reagan," says Norman Watts, who served as statewide co-ordinator for the Reagan campaign in 1970.

"It's not the staff. It's Reagan. I don't think that Reagan should be president because you can't have a 9-to-5 president. It would be dangerous to the country and dangerous to the party."

Says a leading California businessman who has raised or contributed tens of thousands of dollars for the former governor:

"He is a fine, decent man who did a good job in California. But he lacks the wide intellect necessary for the presidency. Not that Ford has all that much intellect, either. But he is consultive and surrounds himself with very able people. This is not always true about Reagan."

The list of former heavy financial contributors to Reagan now in the Ford camp is a long one.

Among its most prominent members are department store owner Edward Carter, oilman Henry Salvatori, businessmen Asa Call and Arch Monson Jr., Southern Pacific chairman Ben Biaginni and Taft Schreiber, once Reagan's film agent.

Also on the list, but no surprise, are Leonard Firestone, whom Mr. Ford named as ambassador to Belgium, and David Packard, the former deputy defence secretary.

Some of the big political givers in California Republican politics are resentful, although not for attribution, of the pre-eminence given by Reagan to Los Angeles automobile dealer Holmes Tuttle, the former governor's premier and loyal fund raiser.

Patent Campaign Washed Away...

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Flooding a barn to clean away cow manure uses systems first suggested by the Labors of Hercules and is not patentable, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled today.

The justices unanimously reversed a Court of Appeals order upholding a patent infringement suit by Ag Pro Inc., which obtained a patent in 1965 for a system of barn cleaning.

Under the system, tanks, pipes and gutters were arranged around a sloping barn floor. When the tank was opened, a flood of water cleared away cow manure from the floor.

Justice William Brennan said "systems using water to clean animal wastes from barn floors have been familiar on dairy farms since ancient times." He quoted from mythology about Hercules cleaning the Augean Stables:

"Close by these stables rushed a torrent, or rather a river, the alpheus. Hercules, with one glance, saw the use he could make of this rushing stream, which he dammed and turned aside from its course so that the waters passed directly through the stables, carrying away all impurities, and finally washing them perfectly clean."

Remember when Vancouver's airport hotels weren't near the airport?

Now there's a new hotel much closer to Vancouver's airport than any other. Vancouver Airport Hyatt House.

But please, even though the rates are surprisingly low, don't think of it as an airport hotel. Think of it as a new, super-luxury hotel. With 373 lavishly done rooms and suites. Executive conference facilities. Five restaurants and lounges, including one of the top seafood restaurants in the city. A heated swimming pool. Even its own private marina.

Vancouver Airport Hyatt House, with free limo-service, of course. Just 20 minutes from downtown, very convenient to most of the city's outlying industry. And close to the area's best golf, tennis, horseback riding and fishing. It's the ideal place to stay in Vancouver.

Even if it weren't so close to the airport.

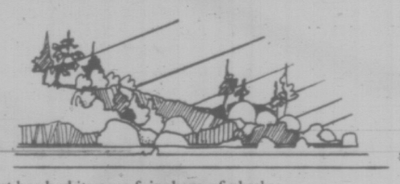
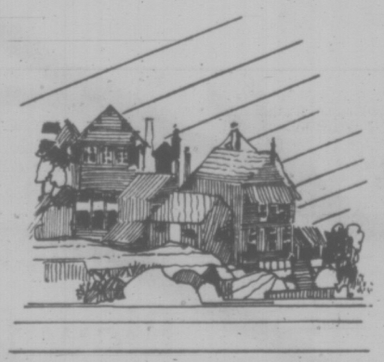
LAUREL POINT

... a good dream come true.



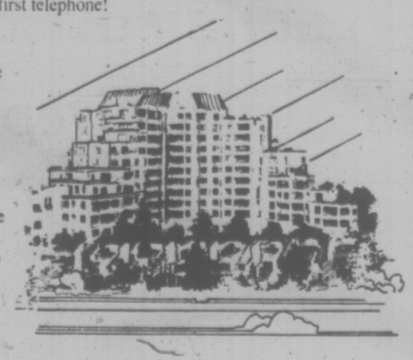
A "barren, rocky spot". That's the way Laurel Point was described 133 years ago when James Douglas came ashore to establish a Hudson's Bay trading post. In March, 1843, he organized the building of a bastion at the present Inner Harbour. For James Douglas, the establishment of Fort Camosun, later named Fort Victoria, was a good dream come true.



And Laurel Point has had its own fair share of plucky dreamers over the years since then. Men like Jacob Sehl who came ashore during the gold rush with thousands upon thousands of other miners, all dreaming of making their fortune by striking the mother-lode. Over 20 years later Sehl finally saw his dream of wealth come true - not as a miner with a lucky strike, but as a prosperous manufacturer of quality furniture. He transformed Laurel Point into a beautiful garden and erected a large factory and elegant mansion.

In the first decade of this century, a young Englishman had his chance to see good dreams come true on Laurel Point. His name was Pendray and he wanted to make soap . . . the rest is history. Within a year the House of Pendray was enjoying booming business in soap and had begun to manufacture paint. Not only did the paint business flourish and play an important role in the economic life of Victoria, but Pendray and a man named Jefferies had seen another of their dreams come true. They linked the Laurel Point factory and a downtown store with Victoria's first telephone!

Now, in 1976, Laurel Point is being transformed into a "beautiful garden" again - a landscaped park will enhance the site, with lots of sunny, open lawn and clusters of trees and shrubs, and public walkways that wander gracefully through the park and along the shore. This is the idyllic setting for the new Laurel Point condominiums and townhouses with the award winning architecture. Their unique, timeless design beautifully blends with the graceful old-world mood and appearance of Victoria. And, as you'd naturally expect, all the best engineered services and modern amenities are incorporated . . . plus some added luxuries we've dreamed up ourselves.



If you love elegant living, a luxurious home, beautiful surroundings - and a sound investment - come see us at Laurel Point. We'll help you make your own good dream come true.

On Broad Street, Flyers Could Be Bullies

By The Associated Press

Philadelphia Flyers are back on Broad Street tonight — so look for them to be the same old Bullies

The Flyers' game is hitting, and now that they've returned to the friendly confines of the Spectrum, expect some hitting when they take on Toronto Maple Leafs in the fifth game of their National Hockey League playoff series.

The best-of-seven Stanley Cup quarter-final is tied 2-2, as are the quarter-finals between Los Angeles Kings and Boston Bruins and between New York Islanders and Buffalo Sabres. Those series also continue tonight at Boston and Buffalo.

Montreal Canadiens swept Chicago Black Hawks in the minimum four games, when they defeated the Hawks 5-4 Sunday night.

"We can't change and be effective at the same time," said Flyers' assistant coach Mike Nykoluk. "Our game is to take the body, and we must do that to win.

"We will be taking the body as much as ever. We want to win."

The Leafs evened the series be beating the Flyers 4-3 Saturday night in a game which saw only 10 minor penalties.

That was a stark contrast to Thursday night's game, in which 173 penalty minutes were called and criminal charges were filed against three Philadelphiaplayers by Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry.

Nykoluk noted that the usually tempestuous Flyers had their troubles adjusting Saturday. Coach Fred Shero agreed that his club should feel more comfortable back home.

"What has transpired in Toronto has bothered this club to a degree," Shero said. "I'm confident when we get back home we'll be more comfortable.

"We'll feel better and we'll play better."

That was echoed by Dave Schultz, the Flyers' combative wing.

"There's no doubt I'll feel better in the Spectrum," he said. "I can still go out there and hit, but I can't take any cheap penalties. We have had enough of them."

Schultz also expressed relief that he stayed out of most of the brawls in Thursday night's game.

"If I was involved in all of this, the charges against everybody else would have been dropped and I would still be in jail in Toronto.

"The whole thing really affected me. Here we are trying to get ready for a game mentally and on Friday some of our players are at the police station. On Saturday they are in court. How do you think you would feel under those circumstances?"

Buffalo, like Philadelphia, is happy to be home. The Sabres won two games at home, then dropped the next two on the road. But the losses didn't bother Punch Imlach, Buffalo's general manager.

"If they get the next game, then I'll start to worry," he said. "I never expected four straight. I would take it, but there was no way I expected it."

Buffalo winger Rick Martin was applying heat to his infected elbow, steaming at "Being made to look like the goat" of Saturday night's loss to the Islanders.

He admitted he had been chewed out by Imlach for playing golf Friday rather than resting his elbow. He denied that his swing through the links had affected his slap shot Saturday night.

Jerry Korab was complaining that the Sabre forwards have not been checking enough in the Islanders' zone to take the heat off him and the other defencemen.

Korab explained why Sabre defencemen have experienced too many two-on-one Islander breakaways.

"New York has been throwing the puck into our end and going in and getting it," he said.

"We've been throwing it in and not getting it. The puck has been coming off the boards to them and away they've gone.

"I don't think more than two checks have been put on their defencemen in their end in the four games."

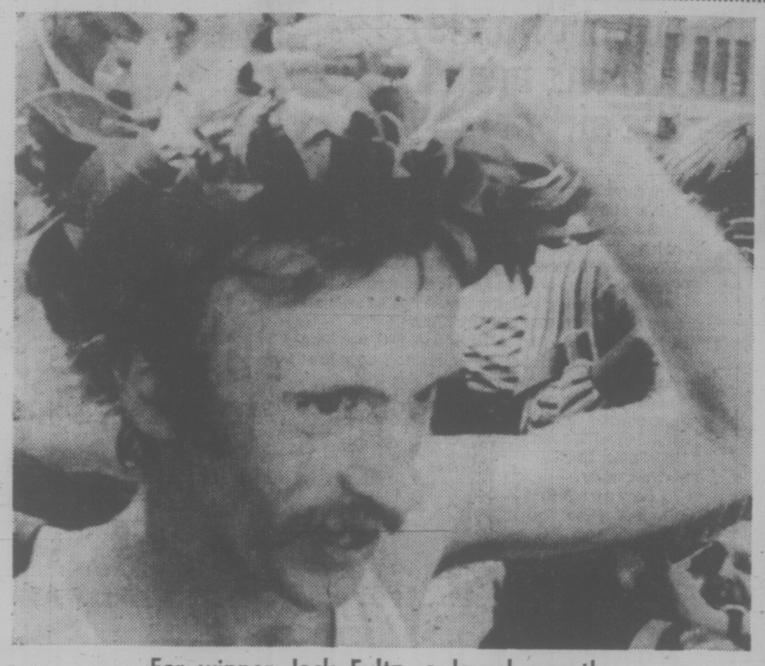
Coach Floyd Smith was stirring the angry locker room stew. He faulted his defencemen as well as his forwards for a general lack of aggressiveness.

"Sure, I'd like to see my forwards a little more aggressive in the Islanders' end," he said. "But I'd also like our defencemen to be a little more aggressive in our end."

Boston coach Don Cherry said winning the fourth game against the Kings may have been the turning point in that series.

"It was a big victory for us," said Cherry. "It swung the momentum back to us.

"Now we just have to keep it going. The Kings are a good team and it's going to be tough from here on in. But we do have two out of three games in Boston, and we're ready."



For winner Jack Fultz, a laurel wreath

Hot Marathon

BOSTON (AP) — Jack Fultz, a 27-year-old Georgetown University senior from Arlington, Va., overcame blistering heat and charged from behind for a hard-earned victory Monday in the 80th Boston Marathon.

Overlooked by many experts in the field of 1,898 starters, Fultz took the lead with about eight miles to go and pulled away, covering the 26-mile, 385-yard course from Hopkinton to Boston in two hours, 20 minutes and 19 seconds.

Mario Guevas of Mexico was second in 2:21.13, followed by Jose de Jesus of Puerto Rico in 2:22.10 and pre-race favorite Jack Foster of New Zealand in 2:22.30.

The course record of 2:09.55, set by Boston's Bill Rodgers last year, was never threatened because of extreme heat at the high-noon start.

Fultz, who returned to college after serving in the U.S. Coast Guard, trailed Mabuza by just 15 seconds at the fourth checkpoint, 17½ miles from the start.

Suddenly Fultz bolted to the front as Mabuza tired. Heading into the first of four hills, Fultz gradually widened his lead. He took the hills, including famed heartbreak which doomed so many runners in the past, in easy fashion.

"This was the hottest weather I've ever run in," said Foster, recent winner of the New Zealand championship. "I've run in hot weather before, but nothing like this."

The first woman to cross the finish line was Kim Merritt of the University of Wisconsin.

For Kim Merritt, aching feet

Unser Transformed From Goat to Hero

By The Associated Press

With one wave of his wand, Del Unser made a baseball disappear and at the same time changed himself from a goat into a hero Monday night.

A misplay by the New York outfielder allowed two St. Louis runs in the first inning, but he made up for it in the 17th with a home run that provided the Mets with a 4-3 victory in a National League baseball game.

"When you get into extra innings, there's no sense fooling around," said Unser, who connected on a Mike Wallace fastball with two out to break up a marathon four-hour, 46-minute game.

The homer ended a dramatic battle which had been tied by the Cardinals in the seventh inning, some two hours before.

"He's the type of guy that wanted to get ahead," said Unser, who once played with Wallace on Philadelphia Phillies. "If he had, he's got a good fork ball, and a good curve and he would have been tough to hit."

Extra-inning games are old hat between the Cardinals and Mets. Two years ago, they played a seven-hour, 25-inning affair at Shea Stadium, the longest night game in major league history.

In Monday's other National League games, Houston Astros beat Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 and Montreal Expos downed Chicago Cubs 4-3. In the American League, California Angels belted Baltimore Orioles 9-4, Oakland A's tripped Detroit Tigers 6-5 in 10 innings and Boston Red Sox blanked Minnesota Twins 2-0.

Unser's hit was his first in eight at-bats and the only extra-base blow among 18 Mets hits off Wallace and five other St. Louis pitchers.

Aided by a St. Louis error, New York wiped out a 2-0 St. Louis lead with a three-run rally in the second inning and protected that slim edge until Vic Harris and pinch-hitter Ron Fairly hit doubles for the Cardinals off New York ace Tom Seaver.

Jose Cruz belted a three-run triple to highlight a four-run first inning and led Houston past Los Angeles. The victory lifted Houston into an unaccustomed position—first place in the West Division.

Pete Mackanin's two-run homer in the fourth inning and Mike Jorgensen's run-scoring double in the seventh carried Montreal past Chicago. Mackanin's homer following a walk to Tim Foli, was the 13th of his career but ironically only his first with a man on base.

ERVING PROVIDES PROOF OF VALUE

By The Associated Press

Julius Erving has been the American Basketball Association's most valuable player for each of the last three seasons, an he showed why Monday night.

Erving's 32 points helped New York to a 110-108 lead over San Antonio Spurs, and his blocked shot in the final five seconds kept it that way as the Nets grabbed a 3-2 advantage in their best-of-seven semi-final.

With nine seconds to go and the Spurs trailing by two, San Antonio called time out and set up a play for Mike Gale, a former Net, shook free along the left side some 18 feet from the basket and let fly with a jumper with five seconds to play.

Erving, lurking near the foul line, swooped over and blocked the shot. A desperation try by George Gervin at the buzzer bounced off the rim, and the Nets had their 110-108 triumph.

In the other ABA semi-final, Kentucky Colonels beat Denver Nuggets 126-114 Monday to take a 2-1 lead.

Farmhands Face The Hockey Axe

TORONTO (CP) — Hockey agent Alan Eagleson says there will be a drastic reduction in the number of farmhands employed by National Hockey League teams next season.

Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Player's Association, says that more than $7 million is spent by the league's 18 teams on minor league salaries.

He says minor league payrolls may be the difference between profit and loss for many NHL teams.

Washington Capitals, Kansas City Scouts, Detroit Red Wings, California Seals and Pittsburgh Penguins are all expected to lose money.

Eagleson said the Capitals have a minor league payroll almost equal to their major league payroll—about $900,000 for the minors and $1-million for the majors.

"It's hard to accept that many players will be put out of work by belt-tightening but it's even harder to accept a team going down the drain for the same reason," Eagleson said.

"What will eventually happen is three NHL teams getting together and each supplying six or seven players to the minor league club. This doesn't necessarily mean minor leagues will cease to exist.

"It means that fringe players in Oklahoma City on NHL contracts calling for $30,000 a year will now have to play in the International League for $12,000.

"The best protection anyone has these days is ability. There will be a massive cutdown this year and players will be be thankful to be playing for $12,000."

Flying Sikh Wins

NAIROBI (AP) — Nairobi car dealer Joginder Singh won the 24th Safari rally on provisional results Monday, defeating Europe's driving pros and becoming the first man to win the world's toughest auto test three times.

Singh, called the Flying Sikh for his unswerving speed, roared back from a tour of Kenya's country trails with his turban unruffled.

Singh, 44, survived a jarring incident Sunday when his car struck and killed a spectator who had stepped into the road. Singh, travelling at 100 miles an hour stopped, was questioned by police and was allowed to continue.

The Kenyan became the first non-European to win a major international rally when he took the Safari in 1965. He won again two years ago.

Only six of 23 European and Japanese entries survived into the last hours of the five-day, 3000-mile event. Their attempt to win over East African enthusiasts for the third time in 24 years foundered in mud brought on by torrential tropical rain.

The rally, 50 hours of driving at an average of nearly 62 m.p.h. over mountain tracks and rutted trails through lion-infested scrubland, is considered the world's toughest. Local drivers are usually favored because of their knowledge of conditions.

HIGGINS IN FINAL

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — Alex Higgins of Northern Ireland qualified Monday night to meet titleholder Ray Reardon in the final of the world professional snooker championship.

Higgins, who won the title in 1972, reached the four-day 53-frame final by beating Australian champion Eddie Charlton 20-18 in their semi-final.

Surgery for Lars Blow for Canada

ST. LOUIS (CP) — Canada's national basketball team may have to get along without their first-string centre at the 1976 Olympics.

A team spokesman said Monday that Lars Hansen, a seven-foot centre from Vancouver, underwent surgery over the weekend for removal of his gall bladder and will be out for an indefinite period.

News of Hansen's surgery was released after the Canadians won their fifth game in a row Monday night, defeating St. Louis Kutis, an Amateur Athletic Union team 83-61.

The spokesman said national coach Jack Donohue would talk with doctors to determine when Hansen may be available again. Donohue may have to consider adding to the team if Hansen's availability for the Olympics is in doubt, the spokesman said.

Hansen, who was unable to join the team because of the illness that led to his surgery in a Vancouver hospital, was a starter with University of Washington, a team ranked among the 10 best university teams in the United States for much of the season.

He averaged 14 points a game for the Huskies.

Phil Tollestrup led the Canadians against St. Louis with 19 points and 10 rebounds. Canada led 44-31 at the half.

Bob Town of Winnipeg had 17 points, Romel Raffin of Kitchener, Ont., 11 points and 13 rebounds and Cam Hall of Dundas, Ont., 10 points. Ex-professional Rich Niemann had 19 points for St. Louis.

Victoria Foursome Tops Premier Fivepin Event

Royal Oak Gulf Service, composed of Alex Ross, Sandy MacNeil, Wendy Mudrak and Wally Weinberger, collected the top prize of $600 in the Daily Colonist's 13th annual Vancouver Island Fivepin Bowlspiel which concluded Sunday at Town and Country Lanes.

The Victoria squad tripped Four Spades of Nanaimo 2,360-2,512 to win the premier Colonist Event and finish off a seven-game unbeaten streak.

Royal Oak reached the final with a 2,885-2,654 victory over Master Key, a University of British Columbia entry, while Four Spades, the only scratch team in the limit entry of 128 foursomes, advanced with a 2,949-2890 win over Once Again.

Weinberger anchored the Royal Oak semi-final win with a 384 second game, which was the individual high for the bowlspiel.

Other major shares in the $3,300 prize money were claimed by Two Plus Two and a Port Alberni entry named The Luvits.

Two Plus Two won the Scorpion Men's Wear Event and The Luvits won the Mayfair Event. Each team collected $500.

Two Plus Two defeated Hot Dogs in the final after disposing of Mean Machine in the semi-finals. Hot Dogs defeated Fantastic Four in the other semi.

The Luvits topped boneheads in the final after advancing with a decision over Muffs. Boneheads sidelined Ladysmith Bowladrome in the other semi-final tussle.

Other bowlers, who couldn't be on any of the money-winning teams, collected individual awards.

Ed Brunt of Campbell River rolled a 932 series to top male competitors and Vera Lysne of Victoria topped the women with 854. Julian Pasichnyk of Port Moody (373) and Helene Leerholm (348) rolled the high singles.

Visiting Teams Dominate Island Tenpin Bowlspiel

Visiting teams won two out of the three events in the annual Vancouver Island Tenpin Bowlspiel which concluded Sunday at Mayfair Lanes.

Doghouse No. 1 of Campbell River went unbeaten through seven games to win "A" event honors and $500 of the $2,400 in prize money.

The Campbell River squad beat The Rich 2,407-2,360 in the final. Wally Bilan rolled a 539 series, Art Woodruff had 543, Yvon Savoie chipped in a 430 and Lorne Scott added 485 for the winning team.

Doghouse advanced to the final with a 2,410-2,272 victory over their co-entry Doghouse No. 2 while The Rich topped Acklands 2,531-2,316 in the other semi-final.

Scorpio Productions emerged as the only Victoria-area winner with a 2,426-2,278 triumph over Ramblers in the "B" event final. Scorpio topped Chargers 2,467-2,439 in the semi-finals while Ramblers gained a berth in the final with a 2,400-2,290 win over Mayfair Coffee Shop in the other semi.

The other out-of-town winner was New Westminster Mainlanders, who collected the "C" event with a 2,422-2,388 victory over Holy Rollers No. 1.

Mainlanders topped Tutner's Ramblers 2,384-2,309 and Holy Rollers No. 1 bounced Ups And Downs 2,365-2,341 in the semi-finals.

The winning teams in the "B" and "C" events each collected $360.

Fred Lobbezoo rolled the high men's series of the tourney with 667 while Stella Metz topped the women with 611. Stan Hooks (267), fired the high men's single while Heather Musgrave and Arlene Garrington, both with 234, had the high women's singles.

More Selective Program For 'Qualified Player'

Dale Shaw feels she played in too many tournaments last year, plans to be more selective and, as it happens, will leave Thursday to start on her 1976 campaign.

Having "played in too many" tournaments didn't hurt Dale. The busy schedule and her runner-up finish in the Canadian championship were the reasons the Canadian Ladies' Golf Association rated Dale as the nation's No. 1 woman golfer.

The honor pleased her, and the season was satisfying only because "I played well in the tournaments I wanted to play well." Still, she confessed Monday, Dale feels she "never had such a great year."

In addition to her strong performance in the Canadian, the Glen Meadows member played well on a European tour, was the medallist in the prestigious Helen Doherty tournament in Florida and, in partnership with Lancy Smith of the U.S., placed second in the U.S. National Fourball Championships for the second time.

Indeed, 1975 was a pretty good year.

Monday's inference was clear. It would have been better, she feels, with a victory here or there. That's why Dale wants to reduce this year's commitments, observing the theory that a more limited schedule will help her put greater concentration into remaining events.

★ ★ ★

For Dale, it will start with the popular North-South tournament at Pinehurst, N.C., next week, to be followed by the Women's International at Hilton Head, S.C. Then she'll be back to compete in the Victoria City championships, the B.C. test at Capilano, the Canadian at Prince Albert and the U.S. Amateur at Sacramento.

In between and in the meantime, Canada's No. 1 player is "still learning new things."

"It takes a long time to learn to play golf," and that's from one who has been at it for only eight years. "There are new things, and also you have to work on the weak part of your game. For example, I had trouble with my putting. I worked on it and now putting may be the strongest part of my game."

"It's amazing how it goes."

Dale is looking forward to playing in the Carolinas, especially in the International. It's patterned after the Masters tournament and the women even asked the Augusta people if they could call it the "Ladies' Masters."

Sorry, said the Augusta people, who own a copyright on the "Masters" title.

So it will be the "International," but the format is familiar. By invitation only . . . to the top 40 money-winners on the LPGA tour . . . the past 10 U.S. open (ladies) champions . . . and winners of 1975 U.S., Canadian and British titles . . . members of Curtis Cup teams . . . and etcetera.

A question had begun to form in my mind when Miss Shaw took the page of requirements from my hand.

"And if you're wondering how I got the invitation, that's me," she said and pointed to the one-line paragraph that read: "Qualified Foreign Player."

Liverpool Remains In Top Soccer Spot

LONDON (AP) — David Fairclough, 19-year-old soccer discovery, scored two goals in the last two minutes Monday, as Liverpool slammed Manchester City 3-0 at Manchester and stayed in the lead over the last stretch of the English League title race.

Queen's Park Rangers and Manchester United were still on Liverpool's heels.

Gerry Francis scored from a disputed penalty three minutes from time to give Rangers a 2-1 win over Arsenal. Manchester United won 1-0 at Burnley with a second half goal by Lou Macari.

Liverpool has 58 points, Rangers 57 and Manchester United 54. Liverpool and Rangers have only one game left, but United has three.

Fairclough, who has been scoring goals as a late substitute, was included in Liverpool's lineup for the first time. Steve Heighway sent Liverpool into the lead in the second half, and Fairclough kept up his scoring record with goals in the 88th and 89th minutes. He has now scored in the last four games.

Burnley lost its battle to stay in the First Division and will be relegated along with Sheffield United. Burnley did most of the attacking in the first half. Peter Noble headed in but was ruled offside and a penalty appeal was refused when United's Alex Forsyth appeared to handle.

A crowd of 51,983 saw Sunderland defeat Bolton 2-1 and make sure of promotion from the Second Division. Sunderland will play in the First Division next season for the first time since 1970.

Attendance Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Attendance at regular-season World Hockey Association games topped the four million mark for the second year in a row, the league announced Monday.

Total attendance in the three-division league was 4,123,121, an increase of 27,210 over last season's 4,096,511.

The Eastern Division, composed of New England Whalers, Indianapolis Racers, Cincinnati Stingers and Cleveland Crusaders, drew 1,287,315 fans, with New England leading the way with 372,334.

Total attendance in the Western Division was 1,218,133. Houston led the division with 367,187.

Quebec Nordiques led the Canadian Division in attendance with 395,383, 98.8 per cent of the capacity of the Quebec Colisee. Winnipeg Jets had a total of 347,383.

Total attendance in the Canadian Division, including Edmonton Oilers, Calgary Cowboys and Toronto Toros, was 1,617,673.

Braves Reach Semis

John Newberry led Saanich with three goals and singles were contributed by Torrie Robertson, Jim Michaels and Shawn Connors.

It was the third straight victory for Braves since bowing to Edmonton on the opening day of the 24-team tourney.

Braves were to meet Red Deer and Saskatoon was scheduled to play Prince George in consolation semi-finals earlier today with the winners meeting in the final this afternoon.

Seattle, meanwhile, upset defending-champion Sarnia, Ont., 4-3 Monday to gain berth in the championship final. Peterbourough, Ont., defeated Swift Current 9-2 in the other semi-final.

Vancouver Juniors Dominate

Bowering captured the under-14 singles crown and partnered Stephen Haqq to victory in the doubles final while Geddes won the under-18 singles and shared the doubles title with Gerald Clerx.

Tag-Team Clash Headlines Card

Jimmy Snuka and Don Leo Jonathan will be defending the Canadian tag-team title against Gene Kiniski and Seigreid Steinke in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Thursday at Memorial Arena.

ATHLETES ARE ANGRY

HASTINGS, N.Z. (Reuter) — A group of 60 athletes have passed a vote of no confidence in New Zealand's Olympic selectors and called for another look at the country's team of 88 for the Montreal Games in July.

A spokesman for the group, gathered here for the Highland Games, said the vote of no confidence was aimed at the three-man selection panel and Olympic selection procedures.

The group, which includes 5,000 metres hope Rod Dixon, is angry that five top competitors were left out of the team announced a week ago.

They are asking the selectors to reconsider the five athletes who have reached the Olympic qualifying standards and who were "likely to improve with competition."

Home Club Wins Midget Tourney

SWIFT CURRENT (CP) — Swift Current Legionnaires defeated Edmonton Jenner Pontiacs 7-4 to win a midget "A" hockey tournament Monday night.

The most-valuable player award for the tournament, attended by 12 teams, was given to Doug Wiebe, captain of the Legionnaires.

Team Tennis Is Target Of Lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Can Sports Inc., of Toronto, filed suit in federal court Monday against World Team Tennis, claiming losses of more than $1 million.

Can Sports, Inc., a holding company controlled by John F. Bassett, owned the Toronto-Buffalo Royals franchise in 1973 in the WTT. Can Sports said in the suit that it bought into the league in 1973 but on Jan. 31, 1975, the WTT terminated the deal.

The plaintiffs accused the WTT of breach of contract and conspiracy in preventing Can Sports from fielding teams in the league.

Defendants include the teams in the league and league officials.

The World's Biggest Honda Civic.

Honda Civics start as low as $3159.

It's the new Honda Civic station wagon, boasting all the usual Honda Civic attributes. Good handling, excellent stability, and top gas efficiency, because of front wheel drive. Precision steering due to rack and pinion design. Sure stopping thanks to power assisted front disc brakes. Smooth ride owing to MacPherson strut front suspension. Increased passenger space resulting from sideways mounting of the engine.

A Honda Civic it is, and bigger. The station wagon's engine is beefier at 1500 cc's, to give you the same pep under a heavier load. The wheel base is stretched a little too, to 89.8 inches. Which also gives rear seat passengers room to stretch their legs a little more.

With the rear seat folded down, there's 53 inches of perfectly flat carrying space. A total of 49 cubic feet, all made accessible through five doors.

NO SHAKE NO SHIMMY NO ROLL

Here's why:

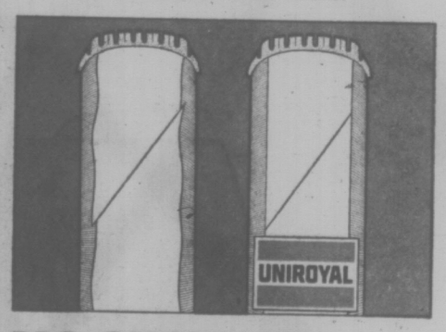
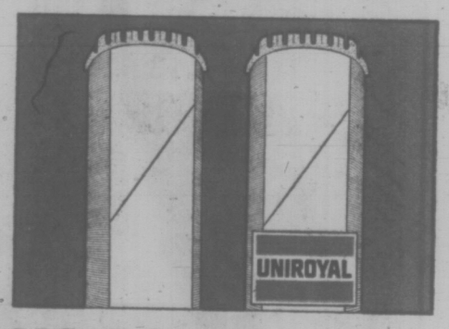
NO SHAKE At Uniroyal our patented process makes our steel belts fit end to end. There's no overlap. So our tires run smoother, last longer.

2 SHAKE In all steel belted radials the tire follows the belts. If the belts are crooked, even a little, the tire shimmies, wearing the tread unevenly. Many a mechanic has spent long hours trying to figure out the cause of uneven tread wear.



NO SHIMMY Our new patented process puts our steel belts on straight. If your car ever develops a shimmy, check to see whether poor road conditions or mechanical difficulties exist. Remember, the smoother a tire runs, the longer it lasts.

3 ROLL If steel belts are placed off centre, the running force will pull the tire to the left or right so that it wears on the shoulder.



NO ROLL Our patented process puts our steel belts on... dead centre. The tire runs true, not off to one side wearing the shoulder. Our tires run smoother, last longer.

RADIAL TIRE INFORMATION PAMPHLET

Scottish Victory

CANNES, France (AP) — Scotland won the 25th Cannes international junior soccer tournament Monday, defeating France 1-0 in the final. Brazil placed third ahead of Mexico, Holland, Finland, Italy and Iran.

Loseth, Arnold Gets Fast Starts

VANCOUVER — The weather dampened the opening of refurbished Exhibition Park Monday night, but 11,304 thoroughbred followers showed up and put $707,132 through the mutuel windows.

The first 1976 card was featured by the riding of Chris Loseth, the leading apprentice last year and second over-all, and Jim Arnold and Garth Carter.

Loseth had his mount in the money in the first eight races, winning twice, placing twice and showing four times. Arnold had three winners and a place finish and Carter won twice and finished third once.

Czechs Aren't Champs, Yet

KATOWICE, Poland (AP) — The elimination round of the world hockey championships came to a close Monday with Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union, Sweden and the United States advancing to the top group.

Poland, West Germany, East Germany and Finland will play in the bottom group.

Under the new rules, the four top teams in the elimination round will now dispute the medals in a round-robin pool, while the last four will play each other for fifth and sixth places, guaranteeing a berth in the A group next year.

The two last-placed countries in Group A will be dropped to Group B to make room for Canada and Romania, winner of this winter's Group B championships.

The eliminations were marked by two upsets when Poland and Czechoslovakia beat the Soviet Union.

Czechoslovakia and Russia — despite the upset by the Poles — were clearly the outstanding teams in the first round. The Czechs built themselves a comfortable four-point margin and even a defeat against Russia in the final pool cannot deprive them of the world crown unless they lose to either the U.S. or Sweden, both unlikely.

The Canadian Press erroneously reported Saturday that Czechoslovakia had won the world hockey championship. Czechoslovakia's 3-2 win Saturday over the Soviet Union gave the team a guaranteed first-place finish in the first round, not the championship.

In games Monday, the Soviet Union beat the U.S. 5-2 and Czechoslovakia downed West Germany 9-1.

BEAUFORT OFFSHORE WELLS WORRY U.S.

By VICTOR MACKIE
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Concern has been expressed to the Canadian government by the United States government over the environmental impact of the decision to permit Dome Petroleum to drill the first offshore wells in the Beaufort Sea, it was learned Monday.

A number of official and technical level meetings have been held between the two governments since last January when the Americans were advised of the Canadian government's proposal to consider permitting drilling in the environmentally-sensitive Beaufort Sea.

The Canadian cabinet last week approved a drilling program after shortening the exploration season in the northern waters and raising the amount of a clean-up bond to $50 million from $10 million.

Since that decision by the cabinet the U.S. authorities have not been made fully aware of all the factors that went into it. All the data that was before the Canadian government in its deliberations had not yet been made available to Washington, a spokesman for the United States embassy said Monday.

U.S. authorities, however, have voiced a number of concerns over the drilling plan. There is the question of liability. There is also the question of contingency planning for possible spills and blow-out controls.

MANAGER LEAVING MUSEUM

Phillips said he will work as an assistant forester with MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in Port Alberni.

He originally planned to stay with the museum for five years but the changeover from the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum to the B.C. Forest Museum in 1975 enticed him to stay until everything was running smoothly.

"I feel it is now or never as far as getting back to the industry," he said. "I think the museum will benefit from fresh blood."

The society which supervises the operation, has not yet announced Phillips successor.

Million Christians Cram 'Mini-State'

By JONATHAN RANDAL
Washington Post

JOUNIEH, Lebanon—Slowly but surely the leaders of the Christian redoubt are organizing a de facto separate government for the up to one million Lebanese living under their control.

But the effort is one of desperation for a grim and beleaguered society deprived of gasoline, living on expensive imported food and showing the tell-tale traces of an exodus estimated at 5,000 persons in the past month.

This is a far cry from the once radical Christian goal of partition, which is still officially taboo for psychological and political reasons. Once a Christian threat against the Moslem majority, partition has become a reality.

Since mid-March, the Christians have been blockaded in their heartland — running north and east along the Mediterranean starting from the eastern half of Beirut itself — by their adversaries.

Jounieh, a samll port now swollen with Christian refugees from more threatened areas, is the heartland's unofficial capital.

Over the weekend Bechir Gemayel, younger son of the leader of the right-wing Christian Phalangists, announced the formation of 13 committees. "Tantamount to ministeries," they would act as a "shadow government" to supervise public services in the Christian redoubt, he said.

In Jounieh, for example, a half-dozen state policemen occupied offices in the port, where eight ships waited in the sheltered bay. The police were sent in less than a week ago after local hoodlums were driven out.

It is thought this port, still out of their enemies' artillery range, that the beleaguered Christians leave for abroad and recieve the vegetables, meat, arms, ammunition and gasoline to keep their mini-state going.

At nearby Kaslin, a Maronite Christian think tank which once supported partition as an agonizingly unavoidable step, a priest explained, "We have had to substitute for an absent government."

He told of a mysterious, month-old central committee made up of the various Christian armed groups that meets at a secret headquarters to co-ordinate life in the Christian heartland.

Letters from overseas, for example, are centralized in a Jounieh travel agency and sent out via Cyprus, where a branch serves as a first stop for incoming mail.

The priest also insisted that telex and overseas telephone service were functioning — extraordinary, since it is practically impossible to call through to Beirut.

"We found a way," he said archly, explaining, "frankly, we do not trust anyone anymore, not anyone." To prove his point, he said that the Phalangist radio announcer who boasted about the postal service had been given "a severe bawling out."

He denied reports that the Phalangists had banned the departure of men between the ages of 115 and 50 on the grounds they were needed for military service.

The Christians running Jounieh are not known as philanthropists by their fellow Christians, but seem to be worthy descendants of their Phoenician-trader ancestors.

The one-way boat trip to Cyprus — more convenient for ongoing travellers than the shorter coastal journey to the Syrian port of Tartous — costs the equivalent of $90. From Beirut, the round-trip air fare to Cyprus costs only $36 additional. The Phalange here is said to extrract a special $40 exit tax.

Similarly, food prices are showing the effects of the blockade. Tomatoes cost twice as much here as in the Moslem half of Beirut, for example.

Gasoline for non-military users has been so short that it has practically disappeared from even the black market.

Gasoline sells for just under $3 for a 5-gallon can. The black-market price runs anywhere from 7 to 14 times as much.

On the practically deserted, once perpetually crowded coastal superhighway, a car from Beirut was waved down by Christians. After the niceties were over a girl asked if she could siphon off some gasoline. Her companion, a doctor, opened his car's trunk, removed a plastic bottle and medical tubing and sucked away until the gasoline started flowing.

"It's embarrassing to ask you for this," the girl explained, "but I left my car parked outside one night, and someone siphoned my full tank I'd brought over from the Moslem side."

Then she confided, "They're mad, absolutely mad on this side. They're determined to fight on, and they've got incredible new shipments of arms — including heavy artillery."

The priest at Kaslik explained, "people are afraid of a big Christian carnage" like the 1915 Turkish slaughter of the Armenians, and of a "cultural carnage" similar to that practiced by Nazi Germany.

Back in Christian Beirut, a rich and pessimistic businessman explained he had just decided to move his factory lock, stock and barrel to Syria. "Never before have the Phalangists received so many arms," he said. "It will never end."

Second Death From Accident

RICHMOND (CP) — A second boy has died following a collision April 12 involving a car and two bicycles in the Steveston area of this community south of Vancouver.

Robert Gower, 13, of Richmond, died in Vancouver General Hospital of injuries suffered when he was struck by a car driven by a Richmond woman.

His younger brother Donald, 12, also was killed in the mishap.

Another brother, Rodney Gower, 10, and a 14-year-old companion were in hospital in good condition.

RCMP said Faith Marie Lohnes, 33, of Richmond has been charged with criminal negligence causing death in connection with the accident.

TOWN TALK

During the regular hockey season, the cost of an adult ticket to watch Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena was $3.

That climbed to $3.50 during the playoff series with Medicine Hat and jumped again to $4 in the current series with New Westminster. Doubtless the team and league would bump it yet again if by some miracle the Cougars get by this round.

But what will happen if next season the Cougars are eliminated from the playoffs, for example, six weeks before the season ends? Will the ticket prices decline accordingly?

Don't bet on that or on Bobby Orr's knee.

★ ★ ★

When the circus comes to Memorial Arena later this month the band will be under the direction of Herb Miller, brother of the late Glen Miller.

★ ★ ★

Too bad, wasn't it, that nothing could be done to stall construction work on Capital Iron's Store Street site for even a few days, so that the experts could study that rich archeological deposit?

The site was the only one of its kind in Victoria's harbor area, dating back perhaps more than 2,000 years. It could have told us a lot about the prehistoric Indians who were the first settlers of these parts.

But it's comforting to know that if the powers-that-be had thought it necessary to intervene, they had the legislative muscle to do so — in the form of the Archeological and Historic Sites Protection Act.

Here's an extract from the introduction to "Preserving British Columbia's Prehistory," a little booklet published by the Archeological Sites Advisory Board:

"Ours is a young society still, in many ways immature. However, one measure of our growing maturity is an increasing awareness of the ongoing disappearance of the records of past cultures, and a concern for their proper preservation."

Oh yeah?

The idea is by displaying a sticker in the front window of a home children will know that the place is a safe haven from strangers, street fights or if they are sick or hurt.

Police Chief Jack Gregory has endorsed the idea and says it will be incorporated into the crime prevention package he's working on. Burnaby likes the program too. But the RCMP there want a slight refinement.

They'll agree to it if it's called Block Mother, not Block Parent, and only when the mother is home should the sign be put out.

Apparently they think every father has the propensity of a procustean host.

But Gregory thinks that's going too far. In Victoria it will still be called Block Parent program. He said he's prepared to give the fathers the benefit of the doubt.

Town Talk doesn't like anonymous items, but in this case it makes an exception for obvious reasons.

An alcoholic who has been a prominent sportsman still likes to go out to a drinking-dancing spot with his wife and friends, carrying with him a container of coffee when none is available at the night spot.

He calls it his "medicine" and the technique has kept him away from booze for a considerable time, even on junkets to Nevada gambling casinos where they give liquor away by the glass.

The other night nearly defeated him, however. A doorman at the Army and Navy club spotted the container, pronounced it out of order and promptly locked it up until the party was ready to leave. No amount of persuasion could budge his narrow-mindedness.

A small thing, perhaps, but the kind of arbitrariness that can lead to bigger grievances, our friend suggests.

He and his family were getting gasoline in the Douglas-Gorge area when the dog slipped away, unnoticed. An hour later they returned but could not find her.

"I have four daughters who are pretty upset and pretty mad at their old man," Brian told Town Talk as the family prepared to return to Brooks. Anyone finding the poodle is asked to phone the SPCA which will arrange to get the dog back to Alberta.

A double dress standard at the grand old Empress? It all depends on whether you want to eat or drink apparently, and what day of the week it is.

The redoubtable Bengal Room bar dropped its ban on denim pants some time ago, under the assault of Greenpeace activist Bob Hunter, provincial court judge Nancy Morrison (now vice-chairman of the B.C. labor relations board) and nameless other blue jeans fans.

But one enclave still shuts out the bewoaded (for those who don't do crossword puzzles, woad was a blue dye early Britons smeared over their bodies to frighten invaders) in the old hotel. The regal Empress Room dining room on the main floor still keeps out the scruffy, sometimes.

A young man arrived with his fiancee and her parents for dinner one night recently but he was refused admittance because he was wearing jeans.

He should have come back for Sunday brunch in the same room, when anything goes.

Frustrating, but not as silly as two Robson Street skyscraper hotels in Vancouver, owned by the same man. The rooftop bar at one cares not a fig in the evenings about blue jeans, but you have to wear a jacket and tie. At the other lounge in the sky, of course, shirts could be open to the navel, but if your pants are blue and dehim, forget it.

★ ★ ★

The letters and memoranda which are submitted as agenda back-up material for City Hall's committee metings are generally writen in the formal, stilted style beloved of bureauerats.

But there is the occasional refreshing exception, such as the letter from parks administrator Cliff Bate which was attached to the agenda for last week's parks committee meeting.

Bate's letter was to his counterpart in the city of Vancouver, Stuart Lefeaux, inquiring about vandalism.

He ended the note by saying: "I am still looking forward to spending a day over with you, but God knows where the time goes and he won't tell."

WHAT HAPPENS if they double and we're vulnerable and the finesse misses? Chairs and tables stacked at The Empress await a giant bridge tournament which starts today but Craig Hawthorne isn't really pondering weighty card problems. A member of the hotel's staff, he's likely wondering where the 2,000 tables to be used are going to fit. (Bill Halkett photo)

Hospital Decision 'Close'

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today a decision on the proposed hospital site at Douglas and McKenzie must be made "pretty quickly" and he will meet soon with regional planners.

He conceded that the next move on whether the 25-acre property should be bought is up to the provincial government and awaits only the gathering of some additional information.

McClelland's comments came with word from one of the land owners that two other parties were interested in the site but that a hospital is the preferred project for the property.

The regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission recommended the Douglas-McKenzie land months ago as the place to build a 300-bed acute care hospital to largely replace obsolete Victoria General Hospital.

But McClelland has balked at the estimated cost of $2.5 million and has said the province would pay its 60 per cent share only on a maximum price of $1,250,000.

The commission has since then reviewed all potential sites and confirmed it favors the McKenzie-Douglas location. Directors from the western community on the regional hospital board prefer a site closer to them but have not been able to muster a majority.

The commission, which is charged with hospital planning throughout the Capital district, claims that a site decision for the new hospital is essential before other planning can advance.

McColl confirmed today that two other parties have approached the company about buying the site but he believes it is an ideal place for a new hospital and will do all he can to get it located there.

The partnership offered the property at cost to the regional district for a hospital site about five or six years ago but it was turned down, he said. He declined to say what the price was then.

Spring Weather Dreadful

Yes, it is a dreadful spring we're having. The weather office confirms it.

According to normal pattern since Jan. 1, we have had it cooler, wetter, duller and windier if parts of Saanich Peninsula are included in the survey to the end of March.

During March the fifth lowest temperature on record for that month was recorded — 4.6 degrees, which was the lowest since —7.1 in 1955.

Normal rainfall in the area to date is 252.5 mm. (10 inches), compared with actual rainfall recorded at Gonzales Hill of 331.1 mm. (13 inches).

For the first 19 days of April normal rainfall should be 22mm, whereas the rain gauge has recorded 35 mm.

Police Press Hunt For Terror Suspect

A police spokesman said the suspect is a white male in his early 20s, six feet to six feet two-inches tall, weighing 230 to 250 lbs., with dark brown collar length hair and a tattoo on his right forearm. He was wearing either a black or dark blue T-shirt and blue jeans.

From a licence number noted by a camper, police traced the car owner to a Duncan address only to discover the man had moved several months ago. The search continues.

Police said the man who appeared "spaced out" on drugs or alcohol entered the Fairy Lake campgrounds Sunday afternoon, went up to Douglas Prenevost, 19, of Shawnigan Lake who was working beside his campsite and punched him in the mouth.

Prenevost's companion, Keith Shields, 19, also of Shawnigan Lake, came to help and a scuffle broke out with the assailant falling backwards on to Prenevost's canoe, breaking it in two.

The man left but returned a short time later carrying a large wine bottle filled with gas and with a wick attached and threatened to blow up the campers. He was frightened off when a camper, whom police declined to name, discharged a shotgun into the trees.

LEGAL AID PRIORITY DECIDED

The Victoria office of Legal Aid has announced new priorities for aid as a consequence of the recent cutback in funding by the provincial government.

Jeane Watchuk of the Victoria office said first priority will now go to persons charged with indictable offences, including juveniles whose charges would be indictable were they to be heard in adult court.

Next will be aid to persons facing summary-conviction charges if they are in danger of losing their jobs or going to jail, along with provision of daily duty lawyers in adult court. Final items are advice to ineligible persons and civil and family law along with community and educational work "as time permits."

Plenty of Ocean Splits Debaters

Two Sidney students at Parkland Secondary School will match wits with a pair of Australian students Wednesday in the first international debate of its kind.

Organized by school debating coach Chris Harker, the debate will begin when Colleen Caldicott, Grade 11, and Holly Jacob, Grade 9, address the debating topic Should Canada and Australia retain their ties with the British Monarchy.

Set for late afternoon, the students' speeches will coincide with those of two students at Echuca Technical School in Australia.

Arguments both here and in Australia will be video taped and traded by mail, crossing in the mid-Pacific.

Students here will assess the Australian arguments and organize a rebuttal, explained Harker, adding that all tapes will be screened by judges who will assess the merits of each argument and decide the winners.

Judging will probably occur about the end of May. There will be two judges from each country.

The international scheme was organized by Harker and an Australian teacher, Trevor Williams, after the two instructors "exchanged jobs and lives" last year.

Williams taught social studies at Parkland and Harker travelled to Echuca Technical to take over the Australian instructor's role. Both returned home at Christmas.

While here, Williams also took over Harker's extra-curricular activities, including that of debating coach.

When he returned home the Australian teacher started a debating team.

Harker, president of the Debate and Speech Association of B.C., said the Parkland senior French class will debate whether TV is A Menace to Human Development.

There will be two debaters taking each side.

Debating in French became an issue, said Harker, when B.C. was asked to send seven representatives to the Canadian finals in Newfoundland and B.C. was unable to find one representative to take part in the mandatory French debate.

Hazard Smoked Out

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. will install an additional fire safety feature in its new anti-pollution equipment at its plywood plant on Gorge Road as a result of a minor fire early today.

A company spokesman said a sprinkler system will be placed within the anti-pollution ductwork leading from the three plywood driers. The cost is expected to run into several thousand dollars.

The decision was made after a fire broke out in one of the ducts at 4:28 a.m., caused by a spark from a drier.

The company spokesman said the fire resulted from a build-up of pitch within the pipe.

The potential hazard wasn't foreseen when the anti-pollution equipment was installed earlier this year at a cost of $210,000.

Squints Into Dr. Petch's Tunnel

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

It's been only 1½ years since Dr. Howard Petch took over the president's office at University of Victoria — a term riddled with change!

He arrived just about the time "economic restraint" started cutting into all levels of government funding to universities.

Previously the universities reported directly to the education minister, now they deal with an intermediary, the Universities Council of B.C.

There's a new Universities Act to delineate governing powers within the campus administration and to provide students the channel to participate.

Petch has seen the NDP government toppled and although the new Socred rule book has yet to be completed, there's a tighter rein on funds.

Petch talks about setbacks in building programs. Additions to the MacLaurin Building to accommodate music students are stymied until the new government comes up with new funding procedures.

The newest professional schools of nursing and social welfare are to proceed in September on a shoe-string budget — and the long-talked of school of optometry will just have to wait.

"But it had reached the stage where there had to be some kind of restraints imposed, regardless of which party formed the government," Petch concedes.

And the hike in car insurance rates had the spin-off effect of easing the campus parking lot jam.

Many of the students now without cars will find it easier to use public transportation if UVic succeeds in working out a bus pass system with B.C. Hydro.

"We're hopeful it will be in operation next year so students can pay a flat fee for a seasonal bus pass," Petch says.

"But there's still no light at the end of the tunnel (one of his favorite phrases) for on-campus student housing."

The province refuses to subsidize student housing and on-campus day care, Petch said.

Pencil and paper in hand, he outlines the logistics of the problem.

"I've told them, and told them (the council). If we have to borrow money in the private sector to build 300 more student units (there are 600 now) student fees would have to go up from $157 a month to $241-$249 a month. It's unacceptable."

One of the student senators, he says, is looking into the government funding available for a student housing co-operation, "though why the federal government subsidizes co-operatives after the Rochdale experience in Ontario, I don't know."

In fact, when he arrived from University of Waterloo in January 1974 to succeed Dr. Hugh Farquhar, Petch said he wanted closer co-operation between UVic and the community.

He spent hours addressing community groups and service clubs — explaining away the ivory tower syndrome. And Victorians responded in spades to accommodate out-of-town students.

There's been a big change in students over the last five years, says Petch. They're much keener and career-oriented.

"I don't think they are less socially motivated, but their outlook is different. They don't believe in tearing things down. Social motivation is more real than in the 60s and they can see ways of change through developing expertise, through the system."

"Society wants to do well by its young, I'm sure."

There is growing resentment at large educational tax bills, he says.

"Many people are telling me there's an inadequacy of specialty teachers in the school system . . . and it's bothering people that they're not getting the value for their money.

"And although there's a smaller group of older people carrying the cost of the bulge of young people moving through the education system . . . it'll only take a little while longer.

"The number of students in school will decrease as they move into the employment world and the cost will decrease also. There, there's light at the end of the tunnel."

But the president stresses there's still need for improved facilities because "a large part of this university is still in army huts."

FIVE LOCAL CHAMPIONS

Five of the seven island champions emerging from the 1976 Vancouver Island Chess Tournament last weekend were from Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts.

The first annual event embodying elementary schools from all Vancouver Island school districts was played at Willow Point school at Campbell River, ending with a winner and runnerup for grades one to seven after a season of games involving 6,625 players in 162 schools.

Local youngsters won in grades one, two, four, five and six, for prizes of $15 each. Runnersup each received $8.

Format of tournament day saw northern Vancouver Island districts pitted against southern districts, requiring players to overcome formidable travelling obstacles to meet on common ground.

Participants from Tahsis took a seaplane to Gold River before driving through the mountains to Campbell River; Port McNeill students made a four-hour ferry voyage then drove 50 miles; those from Port Hardy rose in time for a 5 a.m. start and 200-mile drive through the Nimpkish Valley, while Victoria, Saanich and Salt Spring Island players had 175 miles to drive.

The winners were:

Grade three — Royal Arnell, Salt Spring; Trent Ballance, Nanaimo.

B.C. Group Aims at Cancer Screening

A team of British Columbia scientists is attempting to establish a simple testing system to identify individuals who are highly sensitive to cancer-causing substances — including chemical and physical agents and viruses.

Headed by Dr. H. F. Stich, a member of the Cancer Research Centre at the University of B.C. and the UBC Department of Medical Genetics, the research program aims at an eventual screening of persons so that they can avoid substances that could be dangerous to them.

Cancer research projects such as this are supported by funds raised by the Canadian Cancer Society which is conducting its annual campaign for funds this mouth.

Dr. Stich presented a paper dealing with environmental hazards of chemical carcinogens (cancer-causing agents) to the prestigious International Cancer Congress in Florence, Italy, recently. This international meeting, held every four years, is probably the worlds 'most important cancer conference and attracts scientists and medical people from many countries.

He said that "an early recognition of persons showing an exceptional sensitivity to carinogenic agents would be a highly progressive step in cancer prevention."

Although there are no existing statistics, he estimated that there must be considerably more than one million people in North America who have genetic abnormalities that make them ore susceptible to cancer.

"The human population seems to consist of several segments, each having an increased sensitivity to different groups of chemical carcinogens," he said.

The research project hopes to establish a test system that would show the sensitivity of an individual and whether he is likely to develop cancer from exposure to certain substances.

It could mean that eventually, it might become routine that every baby would be tested shortly after birth to identify his sensitivities and enable him to avoid things that would be dangerous.

The problem of identifying persons with a high cancer risk would be tackled in two phases: first, the development of new methods to detect defects at the biochemical and cellular level. And secondly, a trial of these newly developed techniques on cultured cells from patients known to have certain types of gene mutations and on cultured cells from so-called "cancer families" — families that show an exceptional accumulation of malignant tumors.

This latter trial will be handled in co-operation with the B.C. Cancer Institute and the UBC Department of Medical Genetics.

Dr. Stich said the use of human cells for such testing is more efficient, faster, more economical and more relevant to man than the use of laboratory animals.

The assessment of the cancer-causing potential of a compound should include its possible combined effect with other compounds and its different effects on normal, resistant or sensitive persons, he said.

Oh, Well, the Candy Factory Isn't Really Such a Bad Place

By JOSEPH HASTRANGELO

When you grow up ninth in a family of 12, where every child has some special talent, but you are just happy to be in the audience, your mother worries about you.

"What are we going to do about him?" was a question I heard my mother ask my father quite often when they didn't think their 10-year-old was around. The only protection I had when I heard this was to walk into the room so they couldn't come up with an answer.

There was a sister who took accordion lessons, a sister who took piano lessons, another who took singing lessons, and one who took ballet. One brother played the harmonica, a brother played the violin and another brother was a very talented artist.

In the summer, I walked around with a baseball glove pounding the pocket to make a perfect hole. Fall I tossed a football up and down, clutched it under my arm and ran for hundreds of imaginary touchdowns.

Winters I was Eddy Shore, defenceman for the Boston Bruins, waiting for King Clancy to come up the ice so that I could body check him into the boards.

The problem of "What are we going to do about him?" was solved one day when my mother visited my school and the nun told her I couldn't pronounce "three." "He says, one, two, tree." She went on to tell about a nun in the school who was giving elocution lessons one day a week after school for a nickle a lesson.

I had overheard my mother talking with my sister's ballet teacher, who also taught tap lessons. The thought of having to lie to my friends once a week about where I was going if I had to take tap dance lessons bothered me.

Elocution, whatever it was, would be easy to tell my pals, because they had no idea what it was, either.

"A nickle a week because he can't say tree," I heard my father yell. "Let him go work in a factory; they don't care what he talks like." I knew I was protected from my father by the Child Labor Act, and realized why they passed it.

The nun was friendly the way teachers get when you have to stay after school. There were about 20 kids in the class and she was earning her dollar.

We progressed into little sayings like, "How now brown cow, grazing in the green, green grass." The nun said I did very well.

On show-and-tell night, which was one night a week in my house, my father would sit in his chair and everyone would perform their latest lesson. An accordion solo would be followed by a violin solo, and then by a harmonica solo.

The piano student would play and the singing student would sing. The piano student played the piano while the ballet student danced.

Then it was my turn for the first time. I stood in the space between the dining room and the living room which seemed to be the stage, tossing a football and catching it.

"For God's sake, put the football down" was the introduction from my father.

I stood there and made my mouth round like the nun said I should do and said, "Oooowhaa" for exercise, then went into my speech. "How now brown cow, grazing in the green, green grass."

There was a deep silence except for my mother clapping her hands. My father had a funny look on his face and said, "A nickle a week and he is learning how to ask cows questions."

After 40 lessons that lasted 40 weeks and cost my father $2, the nun told me I should continue to recite poetry wherever I happened to be during the summer vacation.

At dinner that night my brother who played the violin sat down, looked at me and asked, "How'd the Sox make out?"

"They won it, four-two," I answered. "Foxx hit a treebagger with the bases loaded in the ninth."

My father just stared at his plate and said, "They're hiring apprentices down at the candy factory for the summer. You won't need a working permit. It's some kind of special summer program. You really should begin to learn a trade."

One rule that applies to all types of stains is to act promptly when an article becomes stained. Don't use hot water on stains which would set with heat, such as blood, eggs or milk. Before you use any stain remover, try it out on a hidden part of the fabric. As some solvents are poisonous and highly flammable, always work in a well-ventilated room when you use cleaning fluid.

The folder also offers specific advice on how to handle greasy stains (oil, gravy, cosmetics, etc.) and non-greasy stains (tea, coffee, fruit, etc.) as well as combination stains (cream, chocolate, candy, etc.).

For instance, fruit stains on bleachable fabrics should be sponged immediately with cool water, because they are difficult to remove once they have aged or have been exposed to heat.

Do keep this practical guide in your laundry room so that you can consult it whenever you are faced with a stain.

By DR. WILLIAM J. WELCH

Living as we do in an age of apparently instant miracles, we take it too much for granted that almost any medical problem can be brought to heel with a properly selected pill or a sufficiently nimble scalpel.

As a result, too little thought has been given to the short and long-term dangers that have become apparent in the use of sex hormones to prevent conception, maintain a pregnancy, put off the hot flushes of the menopause or stop bone growth in young girls.

Evidence associates contraceptive hormones with a significant number of threats to well being. Blood clots in the legs and lungs, migraine headaches and strokes, elevation of the blood pressure and liver problems occur sufficiently often to require a medical consultation before beginning to "take the pill."

And among women of 40 and older who are taking the pill, the risk of heart attack is now recognized as so great that such women are advised to use other means of contraception.

That the use of hormones to maintain precarious pregnancies, as was established practice 20 odd years ago, has put a whole generation of children, who are now becoming young men and women, at hazard of genital cancer was recently recognized.

As for using estrogens to forestall the hot flushes of the menopause or in the forlorn hope of prolonging youthfullness, the reported increased risk of cancer of the lining of the womb in this group has become a matter of serious medical concern.

The use of sex hormones to stop the upward growth of young girls who seem destined to be over-tall has not been widespread. It is estimated that perhaps 1,000 pre-puberty girls have been treated with estrogen in the past 30 years since it has been known that the hormone could control growth.

It does so by prematurely closing up the growth centers of the long bones. Some doctors question the true benefit of estrogen as a growth inhibitor, but so far none have seen adverse effects. However, one can only conclude, in the light of so many adverse reports about its other uses, that we can only wait and see.

A Biting Offer

DEAR ABBY: I hope you won't think this is a stupid question, but I don't know who else to ask.

Is there some place that buys used dentures?

I have six sets that are good as new. They belonged to members of my family who are now deceased. Three pair belonged to my grandmother, and she never wore any of them for more than three months.

It seems a shame to just throw them out if they could be of use to someone.

Please answer this as I am serious. — TEETH ON MY HANDS.

DEAR TEETH: There's undoubtedly a law (with teeth in it) prohibiting the sale of used dentures. And I wouldn't know to whom you could give them.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 31-year-old irate bachelor who always gets the "how-come-you're-not-married" routine when applying for employment prompts this letter:

I'm 45 and divorced many years with no intention of remarrying. Ten years ago I applied for a position with the Chamber of Commerce of one of Ohio's largest cities.

The interview went very well until the man in charge said, "I notice on your resume that you're not married." Then he said with a wink, "Not a 'homo' by any chance, are you?"

I just looked at him incredulously while he went on to sermonize on the virtues of marriage and explain that the Chamber wanted "a family man" whose wife could socialize with the wives of other chamber members and how a single man was usually "unstable" and just wouldn't fit in. He made it clear that a single man was "suspect" and didn't quite have the wholesome, highly moral image they required.

A week later, the same man called and asked me to meet him downtown for dinner that evening to "talk things over." Thinking that he had reconsidered hiring me, I gladly accepted.

When I got to the restaurant he had already had a few drinks, but he wasn't drunk. He was very friendly and told me what a handsome, sophisticated, cool young man I was, as he gripped my hand and slapped my thigh.

He went on to say that his wife and kids were at the lake for a week and he enjoyed being a bachelor for a while because he was trapped in rotten marriage, etc.

"What about the job?" I asked.

"No. Too bad. They still prefer a stable, family-type man. But how about coming to the house and spending the weekend with me, because I'm not all that straight, and I really dig the gay life?"

I simply got up, shook his hand and walked out as he burst into tears and yelled, "Go to hell, you . . . !"—ALL RIGHT.

DEAR ABBY: My sister-in-law does somethingg that my husband and I find irritating. We have eaten at her home many times, and she never says the blessing before the meal unless there is an outsider there she wants to impress. Then she makes a big show of it, and everyone must bow their heads and join in.

She does the same thing when dining out in public. And she does it in a way that attracts the attention of the other diners at nearby tables.

I have nothing against praying. My husband and I both say our prayers every night before retiring. However, we believe that a prayer is something private between a person and his Lord.

My husband and I feel that we should let his sister know how we feel about her hypocritical praying, but we don't know how to say it. Any suggestions? HATES HYPOCRITES

DEAR HATES: Why say anything? Your sister-in-law knows that you know she says grace only on special occasions. She may fool the outsiders, but she isn't fooling the Lord. And that's what counts.

Can You Cut It as an Auto Wrecker?

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS®

Four years ago, Beth Jacobs found herself with three children and the beginnings of an auto wrecking yard. At the time she hardly knew an automobile starter from a generator, let alone whether any particular part was Ford, General Motors or Chrysler.

Today, BJ's Auto Wreckers inventories 100 old cars on a quarter acre of land — and she's making $1,000 a month. So can you with a little perseverance and a minimum of mechanical ability. Add the first to the second, throw in about $2,500 for used salvage equipment, and top with a few dollars of working capital; you'll be ready to start recycling North America's Number One Product: The Automobile.

It's really a worthy calling. By recycling parts from old junkers, you can help people stretch limited dollars and somewhat lessen our society's needs for the copper, steel and aluminum that goes into new cars.

Auto salvage yards are as necessary in our country as sunshine is to the nation's crops, but authorities balk at issuing a new wrecking yard permit until its prospective owner has jumped through more than his or her share of hoops. Check your local municipal zoning code to determine whether or not an "auto junkyard" is a permitted use of your property. Many urban and suburban codes regulate or prohibit salvage yards, so don't overlook this step.

When you're squared away with your city, contact the appropriate state authorities. Your province may require you to have a licence to dismantle cars. In addition, you may have to notify your motor vehicle branch each time you pick up a car or keep a file of ownership certificates or bills of sale for all vehicles in stock. Every province seems to have its own way of doing business, so get the facts from the proper authorities.

It may not be easy to get bank financing for a salvage yard. With a small grubstake you can buy a few junkers, tow in some freebies, sell some parts and acquire a few more cars, and soon you'll be on your feet.

Should you hire qualified help or use your own family's labor? It's largely a question of economics. Your bank account may make it hard for you to get started, much less hire any assistance. There's no reason why your family can't split up the chores of towing in wrecks, taking off parts, cutting up junkers, loading scrap iron or working behind the counter.

Some sort of guide to interchangeability of parts will be essential to your operation. These reference books list the parts from one car that will fit another model of the same — or in some cases, a different — brand of automobile. The part you have in stock may not be from exactly the same make and model that your potential customer owns, but you can still make a sale if you know it fits. Check around for these valuable books.

You don't need a lot of other equipment to get started, and with a little ingenuity, you can keep your initial costs quite low.

A tow truck, for instance, is absolutely essential for hauling in the clunkers that will be your stock in trade. But a new one can cost you a huge hunk of change. You can take an old three-quarter- or one-ton truck with dual rear wheels, mount an A-frame, power winch, power takeoff, cables and safety straps on its back, and you've solved your tow truck problem. A look around almost any wrecking yard will turn up one or two similar homemade beauties and give you ideas for designing your own.

The same goes for a loader or boom truck, the tow truck's big brother. It's built on a short wheelbase and has an A-frame extended upward for its hoist. The rig is used to lift engines out of junkers and move otherwise immobile car bodies from one spot to another.

Some wreckers use an old forklift as their boom truck, which can be bought pretty reasonably if you scout some heavy equipment liquidation sales. But if dollars are scare, you can fashion your own.

A cutting or burning torch — for hacking car bodies into scrap or reaching parts made inaccessible by an accident — is another mandatory piece of salvage yard equipment. And you'll need a certain amount of mechanic's tools although there's no need to go overboard.

Beth Jacobs says that you should be able to assemble all the tools and equipment you'll need (if you build rather than buy the tow and boom trucks) for $2,500 — not bad for a chance at running your own business.

Where do you find your merchandise? Regardless of where you live, chances are good that a sizable number of people in your town have a couple of wheezing or completely inoperative jalopies sitting out behind their houses. Just ask around — folks will tell you where you can find an incredible number of junks.

Granted, you can't be choosy on these deals, but they'll sustain you until you have a grubstake and know what you can sell. Later, your clientele's needs and wants will guide the selection of your purchases.

Most late model and near-new wrecks are bought by salvage yards through bids to insurance companies. Only you can determine whether you can afford to tie up a lot of money in a single newer automobile. If your operating capital is small, you may have to think "old" for a while. Besides, if you're thinking in terms of a family operation with small investment and low overhead, you can net enough from selling parts from older models to make the operation worthwhile.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel:

I've read in your column and in many books about how to plant baby Spider Plants. But never have I found if it's best to leave the babies on or take them off as they get bigger. Which is best for the mother plant? If you leave the babies on too long, will they die? My spider is my favorite plant and it's doing beautifully in my bathroom window and I'd like to keep it going strong.—Mrs. J.S.

Dear Mrs. J. S.:

Naturally, the main attraction of the beautiful green-and-white spoder plants (sometimes you'll find one in solid green) are the long, creamy stems which form the baby "spiders" at the end, so it's best — if only decoratively speaking — to leave as many babies on the plant as possible so as to present it at its fullest, lushest, breathtaking best.

However, once the babies have matured, and rather large, husky roots have formed on the bottom, it won't hurt either the baby or the mother to wean a few away, pot them up in sterilized potting mix and start new plants both for yourself and your friends. Perhaps, if your plant is extra sensitive, the shock of seeing its little ones leave the nest might be a bit traumatic. But don't worry, it'll plunge ahead and produce more.

In short, don't take off too many and destroy the fullness of the plant. Wait until the babies get really large and then cut a few off just above the top of the plantlet, plant 'em up and wait for your new spiders to weave their magic web all over again.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

There are many deals that arise in the course of a session of play which offer convincing illustration of the advantage of watching and remembering the "spots" on the low cards that have been played. Today's deal, which came up in a rubber-bridge game, serves as an example of this point.

SOUTH
♡ 10 5 4

♣ Q 10 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♠.

When South bid three notrump on his flat 13-point hand, he was overbidding. As he should have viewed it, if North couldn't bid three notrump knowing that South had at least 13 points, how could South have bid three notrump on the same 13 points he had already announced?

Dummy's queen of spades was played on West's opening lead, and it won the trick. All South had at the completion of trick one were six winners. It was equally apparent that the diamond suit offered the best chance of creating additional winners, so declarer promptly attacked that suit.

At trick two dummy's ten of diamonds was led, East covered with the jack, and South's queen won the trick. The board was then re-entered via the ace of hearts, and the diamond nine was played. East covered the nine with the king, and South captured the trick with his ace.

On the two diamond leads, West had followed suit with the seven and eight. Obviously West did not possess either the three or five, for if he had either of these two cards, he would have played one of them instead of squandering the seven and eight. So East was revealed as the possessor of both the three and five of diamonds.

Entering dummy via the heart king, South next led the diamond deuce. When East followed suit with the three, South inserted his four, finessing against East's five-spot. The six of diamonds next felled East's five, and South had himself four diamond tricks. Combined with two spades and three hearts, declarer now had a fulfilled contract.

Of course, deals such as today's do no arise very often. But when they do come up, the player who pays close attention to the denomination of the cards that are played has an advantage over those who are less observant. And it is this advantage that separates the men from the boys.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Wednesday, April 21.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put check on any tendency to be extravagant. Stay within confines of budget. Temptation will be to kick over the traces. Overcome it. Friend who smiles a great deal may be hurting on the inside. Be aware, sensitive and understanding.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get "break" at last minute. What seemed a lost cause is revitalized. Gemini, Virgo could be in Scenairio. Accent is on getting reliable information — and persons. Partner or mate is restless and desires change. Be aware and consider various options.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Emphasis on luxury items, family relationships, special correspondence. You've been searching for key to unlock an annoying dilemma. You find it. One close to you co-operates — if your approach is diplomatic. Act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You require additional information — and backing. Know it; avoid premature actions. Check tax structure, leases, rights and permissions. Pisces, Virgo persons could figure prominently. You gain greater insight into motives of one who is physically attractive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Assume greater responsibility for actions. Public response, reaction, opinion has more impact now than in recent past. Know it and prepare — be knowledgable about public relations. Emphasiis on co-operation, joint efforts, contracts, marriage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Finish what you start; obtain valid hint from Leo MESSAGE. Keep health resolutions, dental appointments. Basic information is important. Eschew apparent shortcuts. Cycle is such that you gain most through soft sell, not via forceful procedures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stress new starts, creative projects — deal with Aquarius, Leo persons. Special relationship encounters some obstacles. Be mature — be independent without being arrogant. You will discover depth of love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You do best now by considering potential, being aware of security. You learn lessons. Key is to apply them. Refuse to be intimidated by one who cites experience. Be sure you get credit that is due. You'll earn respect by standing tall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sense of humor is main ally. That is followed by a flexible approach. Refuse to be pinned down or shoved into emotional corner. Experiment. Ask questions. Spotlight publications, communications. Travel is on agenda.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Count your change. Protect your own interests. Obtain hint from Scorpio message. What you want is available but the price might be inflated. State case in forthright manner. In that way, you will be helped, not hindered.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is high—you overcome obstacles by being persistent. Gemini, Virgo and Libra figure prominently. Emphasis on position, prestige, dealings with professional superiors. Now you can make reasonable requests, even demanls, and have them fulfilled. Know it and act as if you are confident about it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Makn waves, moves. Refuse to be backed into corner of status quo. Gemini, Virgo and Aquarius individuals could be part of picture. Member of opposite sex plays prominent role. If you dare love, you will be loved in return.

IF APRIL 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you enjoy food, socializing, travel. You have fine sense of humor and an inquisitive mind. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. May should be your most significant month of 1976. You come into your own this year. What was started two years ago will now bear fruit. Congratulations!

By J. A. H. HUNTER

Sally greeted her brother as he stepped from the car. "It's great to see you," she said. "How were the roads?"

"Not too good," replied Mike. "If I'd been able to average 10 per cent faster, the trip would have taken just three hours."

(Answer tomorrow)

HERO GREETED BY IRATE MOM

SWINTON, England (CP) — Alan Walker, 13, received a dressing down from his mother when he arrived home dripping wet. No one believed his story that he had rescued a little girl from the canal near this Yorkshire town. But all was forgiven when the parents of Krisha Law, 3, finally traced Alan to thank him for rescuing their daughter.

Care and Feeding of Cacti

There is difficulty in tracing the history of cactus collecting in Victoria, though my knowledge of it goes back to 1940. It would be reasonable to suppose that travellers from the south-west states by boat long before that date, would have brought some of the native cacti with them.

By 1950 importing of seedling plants from California and specimen plants collected from the wild lands of Texas was a well-established business here. Thousands of the larger plants thriving in and around Victoria today were among those shipments.

Since the main cause of failure with these strange, but easily handled plants is overwatering why should everyone not succeed in keeping cacti to hand on to others for generations as is done with Bonsai?

Perhaps the answer lies in another question: Do all owners of cactus plants recognize them as being cacti? What is a cactus?

Home growers of pot plants are not too sure. They will call any plant having a stiff leaf ending in a sharp point — a cactus, including yucca and aloe, which are not. Many include some of the succulents such as Jade-tree (Crassula argentea), Crown-of-Thorns (Euphorbia splendens) and even the Billbergias.

To be a cactus, the plant must have special growth areas called areoles, and from these areoles will come either spines, roots, new joints, or flowers. In most instances except Pereskia, whose leaves are well defined, leaves are so minute as to be indistinguishable to the general pot plant collector. The green thick stems are said to perform the functions of stems and leaves, and from the areoles on the so-called stems are borne the flowers.

Not all cacti have spines, some having soft woolly hair instead; others have long papery "spines." At the two extremes are Ferocactus rectispinus having strong spines two-inches or more long and Mamillaria bocasana with short-hooked spines artfully hidden beneath woolly hair.

One could make a collection of only Mammillarias and still have a varied assortment. Even spines and woolly hair can vary in color and in pattern arrangements to delight the artist.

Columnar cacti add height and line to a collection. The genus Cereus is a bold one, even as an indoor pot plant reaching five feet in 10 years or so. Cephalocereus senilis, "Old Man Cactus," is blessed with a tousled mop of silvery hair hiding spines beneath. Cleistocactus straussii is covered with short white spines each ending in a hook.

These hooks are a warning in handling cacti. They are too easy to get into the hands and difficult to extract. Don't handle even the soft hairy ones without leather gloves. Many large cacti can be handled by a thick folded strip of newspaper being looped around the plant stem and having the paper ends grasped in the hand. This makes repotting possible with little difficulty.

Smaller cacti need surgical forceps with flat looped ends for grasping firmly without damaging tissue or spines. Pad with fine tissue if desirable for some genera.

To come back to the care of cacti: all are native to the American continents (North and South) and all are accustomed to suprisingly low temperatures during the night of their winter season although day heat may well be intolerable for us northerners.

Cacti are capable of storing moisture in the stems to enable them to live during long periods of drought. Also (a point not often recognized) most have vast underground roots which reach out to deeply hidden water sources.

So here we have two keys to culture: Never water until the pot feels light in weight indicating dryness, and try to keep the plants in a cooler tempeature during winter when they can be almost dried out.

Overhead light and direct sunshine are required for all cacti except those which grow in the crotches of jungle trees where they receive dappled light but plenty of humid heat. Of such culture are the types like Christmas-flowering cactus and the Epiphyllums.

Repotting cacti into pots which are larger than needed is another cause of non-survival. A mass of unused damp soil causes roots to rot and prevents new roots forming. So go easy with cacti. Treat them as the hardship-resisting plants they are — asking little, but returning much in interest.

Airport Fence Gap To Remain

The Ministry of Transport has dropped plans to finish the security fence which stretches three miles along a portion of Victoria International Airport at Patricia Bay.
An MoT spokesman said today "money is always a factor", but it is not the main reason the fence, missing 9,000 feet, will remain uncompleted.
"The existing structure is quite adequate for security and safety," the spokesman said.
The first phase of the fence was completed last July for $161,664 and the second was to have started this year to round out the project.
But the spokesman said the existing structure is enough to ensure crowd control and keep airport visitors away from the aircraft.

Hughes Final Days: Mystery Deepens

ACAPULCO (WP) — "I read in the newspapers that everyone's looking for the millionaire's will. What if it were right here inside?"
The plainclothes guard at a Mexican federal building overlooking Acapulco Bay gestured toward a room where two desks and four filing cabinets containing documents are locked and sealed away.
The office furniture and their contents belong in one way or another to the empire of Howard Hughes, and the guard's idle comment reflects the waves of curiosity, speculation and suspicion stirred up by the reclusive billionaire's passage through this lovely resort.
Government officials acknowledge with some expressions of puzzlement that the lawyer representing Hughes' interests in Mexico, Antonio Serro, has so far made no attempt to take possession of the desks and filing cabinets or of other office and medical equipment left behind when Hughes aides suddenly loaded the dying industrialist aboard a Lear ambulance jet for his last airplane flight.
Mexican authorities admit that much of what went on during Hughes' eight-week stay here is still as unclear as the intentions of Hughes' heirs and aides toward the debris of his passage. But, in building a case against one of his aides to support charges of forgery of immigration documents, officials here have, they believe, discovered the shape of at least some of the pieces of the puzzle.
More than a hundred pages of testimony gathered from the housekeeper and security personnel of the Princess Hotel where Hughes stayed, airport employees and immigration officials, offer a picture of increasing alarm as it became clear that the playboy-industrialist-recluse was dying.
For example, on the last morning of Hughes' life his aides — dressed only in their underwear, by one account — were rushing about in a state of near panic, according to several witnesses.
When Dr. Wilbur Thain, described as Hughes' chief physician, flew in to join two U.S. and one Mexican doctor already in attendance, his suitcase full of medicine was held at the airport by Mexican customs authorities.
Clyde Cron, a Hughes aide who said he was paid about $250 a week for such general services as driving and garbage collecting, testified later that he was sent off with a "gratuity" to retrieve the suitcase.
According to a deposition Cron gave officials investigating for the Mexican attorney general, he paid the "gratuity" but does not recall how large it was.
Sixty-six years old, he was the lowest-ranking of the three Hughes aides detained by police here during their investigations.
Crow and the other two aides whose testimony is included in the Mexican investigation said they took turns working two weeks on and two weeks off, going back to their homes in the United States during their time off with all travel expenses paid.
The other two, Eric Bundy, and Clarence Waldrom, testified that they never saw the billionaire leave his bed during his time in Acapulco.
The investigators' documents quote Waldrom as saying that although Hughes "normally took his decisions by giving written orders, in Acapulco he did so only verbally."
The depositions were taken in an investigation that led to Waldrom's being charged with falsifying Hughes' signature on the six-month tourist card registering him as entering Mexico.
The mysteries surrounding Hughes' passage here do not end, Mexican authorities say, with his departure.
The first flight plan filed for the blue-and-white hospital jet that whisked him away showed the destination as Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.
Half an hour before departure, that was changed to New Orleans, via Mexico City and Tampico, with Mobile, Ala., listed as an alternative landing site.

CHARLIE BROWN knows the feeling only too well. And Eric Majer, 3, of North Vancouver, showed his dejection clearly when he encountered a kite-eating tree on Ambleside like the ones that regularly crop up in the Times comic strip Peanuts. Ah well, Eric, console yourself that you're unlikely to be as much of a perennial loser as Charlie Brown.

450 Ferry Workers Facing Layoffs

Cost-saving measures under way at the B.C. Ferries could mean lay-offs of up to 450 employees, the Times learned today.

A union official says his people are "the first bunch of sacrificial lambs" to the Social Credit government. But ferries officials claimed the service is overstaffed.

Negotiations between the service and the union to determine what will happen to the people involved when 450 jobs are eliminated began three weeks ago and another meeting is scheduled for Wednesday.

Norm Thornber, business agent for the marine services general component of the B.C. Government Employees Union said today the government is willing to sacrifice people so the ferry service can become a profit-making venture.

Thornber said the negotiations are at a "completely frustrated stage, we're dealing with a very heartless employer."

But ferries general manager Charles Gallagher said today the service has always been overstaffed and cutbacks have long been needed to make it efficient.

The general manager said he is surprised the union brought the issue to the public and said the move will not do anything to assist in easy settlement of the problem.

According to the master agreement people with less than two years service with the ferries can be laid off and Gallagher said there are more than 450 people who fall into that category.

But the jobs to be eliminated are not all filled by new employees and the majority of the jobs to be abolished are in the catering department, as the ferry service plans to cut out dining room facilities.

People with more than two years service with the ferries must be retrained and relocated within the government, under the master agreement, and Gallagher said newer employees may also be found other jobs.

Gallagher said one concern of experienced people who will retain employment is that they would have to assume lesser positions.

Thornber said the union will negotiate on relocation so people won't lose their jobs, "but's that's small consolation for someone who's been employed in one department for 16 years."

The ferry union will go into negotiations Wednesday and offer to buy the entire B.C. ferry fleet for "one buck".

BCR, UNION RESUME NEGOTIATIONS

VANCOUVER (CP) — The United Transportation Union agreed Monday to stop its work-to-rule campaign as the union and British Columbia Railway agreed to resume contract negotiations.

Paul Weiler, chairman of the B.C. Labor Relations Board, announced the steps following a 12-hour meeting Monday with the two sides.

"The parties have agreed to resume face-to-face negotiations and the board has agreed to provide two of its members to observe these negotiations and to give assistance," said Weiler.

The cease-and-desist order was to remain in effect until the end of the LRB hearings.

RIVER COULD CATCH FIRE

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — Authorities may soon have to put up no-smoking signs along the banks of the Tlalnepantla River to prevent it from going up in flames.

Biochemical engineer Miguel Romero says a study he made shows the waterway outside Mexico City is so highly contaminated with human and chemical wastes that it is "highly inflammable."

The Tlalnepantla is also so toxic that inspectors checking the degree of pollution had to take anti-tetanus injections, according to Romero.

He said that anyone swimming in the river was certain to go bald.

Housing Starts In B.C. Set Record

Times News Services

Housing starts in urban British Columbia set a record first quarter total of 5,451, up 58 per cent from the same period in 1975, Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. reported Monday.

In Victoria, housing starts increased 120.3 per cent, to 282 from 128 in 1975. Greater Vancouver figures showed an increase of 94 per cent, an increase to 1,605 units from 827.

Across urban Canada, the number of starts almost doubled, from 18,367 in the first quarter of 1975 to 36,489 this year.

On a seasonally-adjusted basis CMHC estimates, annual rate of B.C. starts is 26,500 units, while in urban Canada the total is 196,900. In all areas of Canada housing starts are at a rate of 251,000 for the year.

The Vancouver area total of newly-completed, unoccupied houses, duplexes and apartment units at the end of February rose this year to 3,055 compared with 2,699 when the year began and 2,607 a year ago.

Victoria also has more completed but unoccupied dwellings. At the end of February, there were 350 units vacant compared with 245 a year earlier, an increase of 43 per cent.

Current apartment projects under construction at the end of February, with last year's starts at the same time in brackets where applicable: Kelowna 4 (44), Nanaimo 8, Prince George 12, Vancouver 154 (13), total for B.C. 582 (245).

ECONOMY BOOSTED IN U.S.

WASHINGTON (WP) — The U.S. economic recovery quickened in the first three months of the year and the overall inflation rate subsided to its lowest level since the third quarter of 1972.

The increase in the output of goods and services, at an annual rate of 7.5 per cent in the first quarter, was bigger than the 6 to 6.5 per cent which had been expected.

While the economy was stepping up smartly the level of output, prices were increasing at an annual rate of 3.7 per cent, down sharply from a 6.8 per cent annual rate in the fourth quarter and the overall 8.8 per cent rise in 1975.

Maynard Comiez, acting chief economist for the department of commerce, said there is little doubt that the economy, as measured by the so-called real Gross National Product, will grow more this year than the 6.2 per cent the administration predicted it would last January.

Already the unemployment rate has fallen to 7.5 per cent for March and if production keeps improving, even at a rate slower than in the firht quarter, the unemployment rate should continue to fall.

Canadian Rhodesian Hero

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — A Canadian living in South Africa has emerged as the hero of a guerrilla attack inside Rhodesia on Sunday in which three South African tourists were killed.

Eyewitness reports reaching Salisbury and Johannesburg today said Douglas Plumsteel, a UBC graduate from West Vancouver, put the guerrillas to flight by opening fire with his pistol after the attack on a lonely stretch of road about 60 miles inside Rhodesia.

Plumsteel, who now lives in Johannesburg and who was travelling with his wife Margaret, arrived at the scene after the three South Africans had been shot dead and their woman companion wounded.

Behind him in another car was farmer Jannie de Beer, who drove up as Plumsteel began firing at the guerrillas.

De Beer said today: "Mr. Plumsteel was standing outside his car and he called out to me to put my headlights out and keep quiet. I got out of my car and saw two motorcycles lying on the road. Three bodies were beside them.

"A girl was also lying in the road. She was bleeding and pretty badly wounded, but was conscious. The young chap with the gun told me he would provide covering fire while I picked up the girl and the bodies. I had an African with me and we picked them up and put them in our vehicles.

Times News Services

FREDERICTON — New Brunswick's capital city was left without police protection today as the city's 77-man police force went on strike for more pay, refusing response to all but life-endangering emergencies.

City and police spokesmen reported scattered vandalism, break-ins, traffic jams and drag-racing on the main streets of this city of 45,000 after the strike began at midnight, but no major crimes.

In Moncton, with a population of 60,000, the city's 117 policemen vote today to decide if they too will go on strike.

Some all-night fredericton restaurants closed following the police strike and many shopkeepers remained on their premises during the night to guard against looting and theft.

"We've been assured that if public safety is endangered the province will act immediately, either by ordering an end to the strike or sending in the Royal Canadian Mounted police."

The city has offered increases giving a first-class constable with three years' service and now earning $11,000 annually approximately 27 per cent over a 30-month contract.

Police have demanded about the same amount over a one-year agreement.

OUT OF JAIL

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victor Fisher, a Delta, businessman, has been released from the Mexican jail where he had been held since Jan. 7 over a bank cheque mixup and placed in a hospital for treatment of an infected ankle injury.

Mexican friends of Fisher's said in a telephone interview Monday he was removed from the jail to a hospital in Manzanillo after they pleaded his case before Mexican authorities April 12.

"Mr. Fisher feels fine and is getting along nicely with the treatement for the ankle injury," according to a Mexican business man who assisted a Mexican lawyer in arranging for Fisher's removal from the jail to hospital.

"Moving Mr. Fisher from the jail to the hospital was the first step. Other steps will be taken to effect his complete release within a few days," he said.

9-MILE TRAFFIC JAM

All main rail services were crippled by the walkout, which affected about 40 million people, more than one-third of the country's population. (See picture on page 2.)

The strike which started midnight Monday night was called by the two powerful unions of the state-owned Japan National Railways, to spearhead this year's annual spring labor offensive.

They were joined after a few hours by workers on 11 of Japan's 15 major private rail companies.

Municipal transport staff in 39 cities halted bus and subway services for a few hours until 8 a.m.

About 10,000 police were mobilized to prevent any confusion at bus and rail stations, as well as to guard against possible activities by left-wing and right-wing extremists.

The transport ministry estimated the strike will affect 19 million users of the national rail network and 21 million customers of the 11 private firms.

Workers at some Tokyo firms slept at their offices Monday night, arriving for duty with supplies of clean shirts, socks, hand towels and soap—ready for a three-day stay away from home.

Arabs Stone Israelis In Third Day of Riots

Times News Services

JERUSALEM — Palestinian Arabs stoned Israeli troops, lit bonfires and halted traffic today during more rioting protesting the Israeli occupation of West Jordan and Jerusalem.

Israeli troops put a curfew on the town of Tulkarm after Arab students threw up roadblocks on the main street and clashed with security forces. Several rioters were arrested.

Israeli troops also broke up small riots in Jenin and Nablus, where a Palestinian Arab was killed by army gunfire Monday.

Arabs also marched in Bethlehem to protest the occupation.

Two policemen and a soldier were hurt before security forces broke up the protest and arrested four Arabs.

The incidents occurred as tens of thousands of ultra-nationalist Israelis completed a two-day march through the district to demand more Jewish settlements on the West Bank.

All shops in Nablus were closed during the funeral, and some Arabs threw stones at passing Israeli vehicles.

The 20-mile march passed off without incident until the participants approached the finishing point on the outskirts of Jericho.

Young Arabs stoned vehicles which came to pick up the marchers and Israeli security forces moved in to disperse Arab demonstrators.

Gunfire Shatters Truce

Times News Services

BEIRUT — Lebanon's 28th cease-fire in a year of civil war began today the same as 27 others — with the sound of gunfire raging across Moslem-Christian battle lines.

Ten hours after the latest truce went into effect at midnight, mortar and machine-gun fire echoed around the worst battle areas.

At least 60 persons died Monday, 40 other corpses were discovered and more than 100 were wounded.

Earlier, Syrian, Lebanese and Palestinian represenatives reached agreement on five main points to enforce the cease-fire.

The truce provided for:

Scientists Are Now Taking Nessie Seriously

By WALTER SULLIVAN
New York Times

NEW YORK — After years of ridicule directed against reports of a Loch Ness "monster," scientists have begun to take seriously the possibility that such a creature does indeed inhabit the depths of the Scottish lake.

Publications currently issued from such institutions as Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology treat as plausible the evidence collected last summer and three years earlier purporting to show that a large animal inhabits Loch Ness.

The evidence, much of it presented last December in London, was then received with considerable skepticism. Now, however, it has won support from several prominent specialists. It is described in articles in Technology Review, published at M.I.T., and by MCZ Newsletter, published by Harvard's Museum of Comparative Zoology.

Dr. Alfred W. Crompton, professor of biology at Harvard and director of the museum, has told the Loch Ness investigators that he personally finds the evidence "extremely intriguing." It is, he said, "sufficiently suggestive of a large aquatic animal" to call for more intensive investigations along the lines already used in 1972 and 1975.

TOWN TALK

During the regular hockey season, the cost of an adult ticket to watch Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena was $3.

That climbed to $3.50 during the playoff series with Medicine Hat and jumped again to $4 in the current series with New Westminster. Doubtless the team and league would bump it yet again if by some miracle the Cougars get by this round.

But what will happen if next season the Cougars are eliminated from the playoffs, for example, six weeks before the season ends? Will the ticket prices decline accordingly?

Don't bet on that or on Bobby Orr's knee.

★ ★ ★

When the circus comes to Memorial Arena later this month the band will be under the direction of Herb Miller, brother of the late Glen Miller.

★ ★ ★

Too bad, wasn't it, that nothing could be done to stall construction work on Capital Iron's Store Street site for even a few days so that the experts could study that rich archeological deposit?

The site was the only one of its kind in Victoria's harbor area, dating back perhaps more than 2,000 years. It could have told us a lot about the prehistoric Indians who were the first settlers of these parts.

But it's comforting to know that if the powers-that-be had thought it necessary to intervene, they had the legislative muscle to do so — in the form of the Archeological and Historis Sites Protection Act.

Here's an extract from the introduction to "Preserving British Columbia's Prehistory," a little booklet published by the Archeological Sites Advisory Board:

"Ours is a young society still, in many ways immature. However, one measure of our growing maturity is an increasing awareness of the ongoing disappearance of the records of past cultures, and a concern for their proper preservation."

Oh yeah?

The idea is by displaying a sticker in the front window of a home children will know that the place is a safe haven from strangers, street fights or if they are sick or hurt.

Police Chief Jack Gregory has endorsed the idea and says it will be incorporated into the crime prevention package he's working on. Burnaby likes the program too. But the RCMP there want a slight refinement.

They'll agree to it if it's called Block Mother, not Block Parent, and only when the mother is home should the sign be put out.

Apparently they think every father has the propensity of a procustean host.

But Gregory thinks that's going too far. In Victoria it will still be called Block Parent program. He said he's prepared to give the fathers the benefit of the doubt.

Town Talk doesn't like anonymous items, but in this case it makes an exception for obvious reasons.

An alcoholic who has been a prominent sportsman still likes to go out to a drinking-dancing spot with his wife and friends, carrying with him a container of coffee when none is available at the night spot.

He calls it his "medicine" and the technique has kept him away from booze for a considerable time, even on junkets to Nevada gambling casinos where they give liquor away by the glass.

The other night nearly defeated him, however. A doorman at the Army and Navy club spotted the container, pronounced it out of order and promptly locked it up until the party was ready to leave. No amount of persuasion could budge his narrow-mindedness.

A small thing, perhaps, but the kind of arbitrariness that can lead to bigger grievances, our friend suggests.

He and his family were getting gasoline in the Douglas-Gorge area when the dog slipped away, unnoticed. An hour later they returned but could not find her.

"I have four daughters who are pretty upset and pretty mad at their old man," Brian told Town Talk as the family prepared to return to Brooks. Anyone finding the poodle is asked to phone the SPCA which will arrange to get the dog back to Alberta.

A double dress standard at the grand old Empress? It all depends on whether you want to eat or drink apparently, and what day of the week it is.

The redoubtable Bengal Room bar dropped its ban on denim pants some time ago, under the assault of Greenpeace activist Bob Hunter, provincial court judge Nancy Morrison (now vice-chairman of the B.C. labor relations board) and nameless other blue jeans fans.

But one enclave still shuts out the bewoaded (for those who don't do crossword puzzles, woad was a blue dye early Britons smeared over their bodies to frighten invaders) in the old hotel. The regal Empress Room dining room on the main floor still keeps out the scruffy, sometimes.

A young man arrived with his fiancee and her parents for dinner one night recently, but he was refused admittance because he was wearing jeans.

He should have come back for Sunday brunch in the same room, when anything goes.

Frustrating, but not as silly as two Robson Street skyscraper hotels in Vancouver, owned by the same man. The rooftop bar at one cares not a fig in the evenings about blue jeans, but you have to wear a jacket and tie. At the other lounge in the sky, of course, shirts could be open to the navel, but if your pants are blue and denim, forget it.

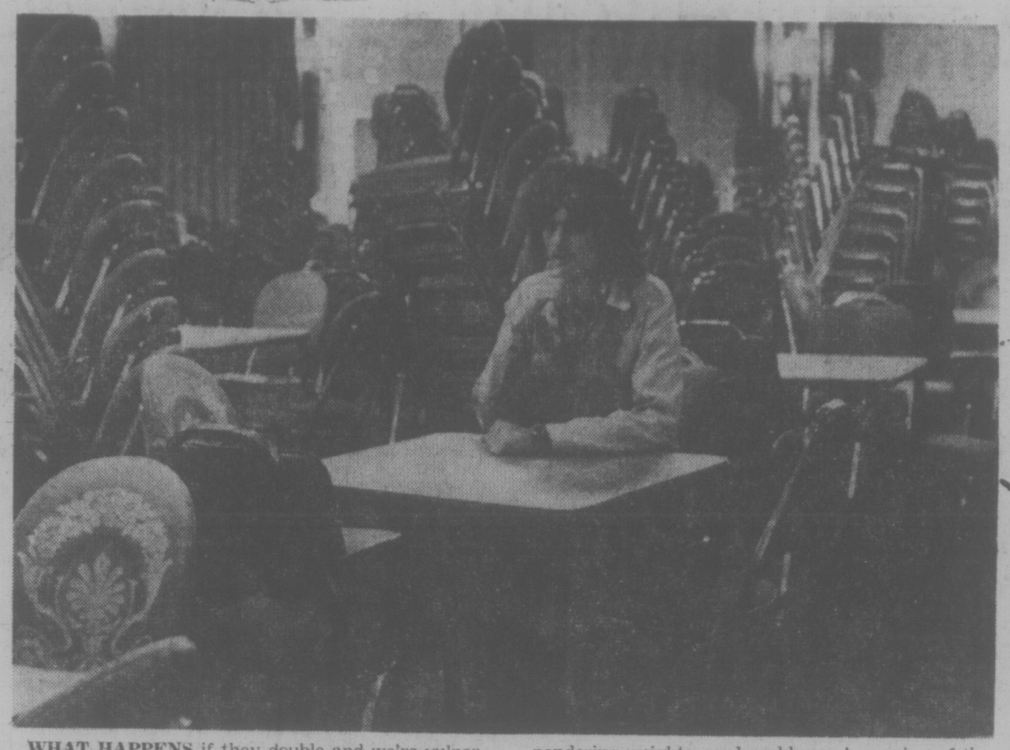
★ ★ ★

The letters and memoranda which are submitted as agenda back-up material for City Hall's committee metings are generally writen in the formal, stilted style beloved of bureaucrats.

But there is the occasional refreshing exception, such as the letter from parks administrator Cliff Bate which was attached to the agenda for last week's parks committee meeting.

Bate's letter was to his counterpart in the city of Vancouver, Stuart Lefeaux, inquiring about vandalism.

He ended the note by saying: "I am still looking forward to spending a day over with you, but God knows where the time goes and he won't tell."



WHAT HAPPENS if they double and we're vulnerable and the finesse misses? Chairs and tables stacked at The Empress await a giant bridge tournament which starts today but Craig Hawthorne isn't really pondering weighty card problems. A member of the hotel's staff, he's likely wondering where the 2,000 tables to be used are going to fit. (Bill Halkett photo)

IT'S OFFICIAL

Spring Weather Dreadful

Yes, it is a dreadful spring we're having. The weather office confirms it.

According to normal pattern since Jan. 1, we have had it cooler, wetter, duller and windier if parts of Saanich Peninsula are included in the survey to the end of March.

During March the fifth lowest temperature on record for that month was recorded 4.6 degrees, which was the lowest since 3.7.1 in 1955.

For the first 19 days of April normal rainfall should be 22mm, whereas the rain gauge has recorded 35 mm.

LEGAL AID PRIORITY DECIDED

The Victoria office of Legal Aid has announced new priorities for aid as a consequence of the recent cutback in funding by the provincial government.

Jeane Watchuk of the Victoria office said first priority will now go to persons charged with indictable offences, including juveniles whose charges would be indictable were they to be heard in adult court.

Next will be aid to persons facing summary-conviction charges if they are in danger of losing their jobs or going to jail, along with provision of daily duty lawyers in adult court. Final items are advice to ineligible persons anl civil and family law along with community and educational work "as time permits."

Police Press Hunt For Terror Suspect

A police spokesman said the suspect is a white male in his early 20s, six feet to six feet two-inches tall, weighing 230 to 250 lbs., with dark brown collar length hair and a tattoo on his right forearm. He was wearing either a black or dark blue T-shirt and blue jeans.

From a licence number noted by a camper, police traced the car owner to a Duncan address only to discover the man had moved several months ago. The search continues.

Police said the man who appeared "spaced out" on drugs or alcohol entered the Fairy Lake campgrounds Sunday afternoon, went up to Douglas Prenevost, 19, of Shawnigan Lake who was working beside his campsite and punched him in the mouth.

Prenevost's companion, Keith Shields, 19, also of Shawnigan Lake, came to help and a scuffle broke out with the assailant falling backwards on to Prenevost's canoe, breaking it in two.

The man left but returned a short time later carrying a large wine bottle filled with gas and with a wick attached and threatened to blow up the campers. He was frightened off when a camper, whom police declined to name, discharged a shotgun into the trees.

Plenty of Ocean Splits Debaters

Two Sidney students at Parkland Secondary School will match wits with a pair of Australian students Wednesday in the first international debate of its kind.

Organized by school debating coach Christ Harker, the debate will begin when Colleen Caldicott, Grade 11, and Holly Jacob, Grade 9, address the debating topic Should Canada and Australia retain their ties with the British Monarchy.

Set for late afternoon the students' speeches will coincide with those of two students at Echuca Technical School in Australia.

Arguments both here and in Australia will be video taped and traded by mail, crossing in the mid-Pacific.

Students here will assess the Australian arguments and organize a rebuttal, explained Harker, adding that all tapes will be screened by judges who will assess the merits of each argument and decide the Judging will probably occur about the end of May. There will be two judges from each country.

The international scheme was organized by Harker and an Australian teacher Trevor Williams after the two instructors "exchanged jobs and lives" last year.

Williams taught social studies at Parkland and Harker travelled to Echuca Technical to take over the Australian instructor's role. Both returned home at Christmas.

While here, Williams also took over Harker's extra curricular activities, including that of debating coach.

When he returned home the Australian teacher started a debating team.

A second debate will also be held at the Sidney school Wednesday marking another first for B.C.

Harker, president of the Debate and Speech Association of B.C., said the Parkland senior French class will debate whether TV is A Menace to Human Development.

There will be two debaters taking each side.

Debating in French became an issue, said Harker, when B.C. was asked to send seven representatives to the Canadian finals in Newfoundland and B.C. was unable to find one representative to take part in the mandatory French debate.

Hazard Smoked Out

B.C. Forest Products Ltd. will install an additional fire safety feature in its new anti-pollution equipment at its plywood plant on Gorge Road as a result of a minor fire early today.

A company spokesman said a sprinkler system will be placed within the anti-pollution—ductwork leading from the three plywood driers. The cost is expected to run into several thousand dollars.

The company spokesman said the fire resulted from a build-up of pitch within the pipe.

The potential hazard wasn't foreseen when the anti-pollution equipment was installed earlier this year at a cost of $210,000.

Hospital Decision 'Close'

Health Minister Bob McClelland said today a decision on the proposed hospital site at Douglas and McKenzie must be made "pretty quickly" and he will meet soon with regional planners.

He conceded that the next move on whether the 25-acre property should be bought is up to the provincial government and awaits only the gathering of some additional information.

McClelland's comments came with word from one of the land owners that two other parties were interested in the site but that a hospital is the preferred project for the property.

The regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission recommended the Douglas-McKenzie land months ago as the place to build a 300-bed acute care hospital to largely replace obsolete Victoria General Hospital.

But McClelland has balked at the estimated cost of $2.5 million and has said the province would pay its 60 per cent share only on a maximum price of $1,250,000.

The commission has since then reviewed all potential sites and confirmed it favors the McKenzie-Douglas location. Directors from the western community on the regional hospital board prefer a site closer to them but have not been able to muster a majority.

The commission, which is charged with hospital planning throughout the Capital district, claims that a site decision for the new hospital is essential before other planning can advance.

McColl confirmed today that two other parties have approached the company about buying the site but he believes it is an ideal place for a new hospital and will do all he can to get it located there.

The partnership offered the property at cost to the regional district for a hospital site about five or six years ago but it was turned down, he said. He declined to say what the price was then.

Squints Into Dr. Petch's Tunnel

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

It's been only 1½ years since Dr. Howard Petch took over the president's office at University of Victoria — a term riddled with change.

He arrived just about the time "economic restraint" started cutting into all levels of government funding to universities.

Previously, the universities reported directly to the education minister, now they deal with an intermediary, the Universities Council of B.C.

There's a new Universities Act to delineate governing powers within the campus administration and to provide students the channel to participate.

Petch has seen the NDP government toppled and although the new Socred rule book has yet to be completed, there's a tighter rein on funds.

Petch talks about setbacks in building programs. Additions to the MacLaurin Building to accommodate music students are stymied until the new government comes up with new funding procedures.

The newest professional schools of nursing and social welfare are to proceed in September on a shoe-string budget and the long-talked of school of optometry will just have to wait.

"But it had reached the stage where there had to be some kind of restraints imposed, regardless of which party formed the government," Petch concedes.

And the hike in car insurance rates had the spin-off effect of easing the campus parking lot jam.

Many of the students now without cars will find it easier to use public transportation if UVic succeeds in working out a bus pass system with B.C. Hydro.

"We're hopeful it will be in operation next year so students can pay a flat fee for a seasonal bus pass," Petch says.

"But there's still no light at the end of the tunnel (one of his favorite phrases) for on-campus student housing."

The province refuses to subsidize student housing and on-campus day care, Petch said.

Pencil and paper in hand, he outlines the logistics of the problem.

"I've told them, and told them (the council). If we have to borrow money in the private secfor to build 300 more student units (there are 600 now) student fees would have to go up from $157 a month to $241-$249 a month. It's unacceptable."

One of the student senators, he says, is looking into the government funding available for a student housing co-operation, "though why the federal government subsidizes cooperatives after the Rochdale experience in Ontario, I don't know."

In fact, when he arrived from University of Waterloo in January 1974 to succeed Dr. Hugh Farquhar, Petch said he wanted closer co-operation between UVic and the community.

He spent hours addressing community groups and service clubs — explaining away the ivory tower syndrome. And Victorians responded in spades to accommodate out-of-town students.

There's been a big change in students over the last five years, says Petch. They're much keener and career-oriented.

"I don't think they are less socially motivated, but their outlook is different. They don't believe in tearing things down. Social motivation is more real than in the 60s and they can see ways of change through developing expertise, through the system."

"Society wants to do well by its young, I'm sure."

There is growing resentment at large educational tax bills, he says.

"Many people are telling me there's an inadequacy of specialty teachers in the school system . . . and it's bothering people that they're not getting the value for their money.

"And although there's a smaller group of older people carrying the cost of the bulge of young people moving through the education system . . . it'll only take a little while longer.

"The number of students in school will decrease as they move into the employment world and the cost will decrease also. There, there's light at the end of the tunnel."

But the president stresses there's still need for improved facilities because "a large part of this university is still in army huts."

FIVE LOCAL CHAMPIONS

Five of the seven island champions emerging from the 1976 Vancouver Island Chess Tournament last weekend were from Greater Victoria and Saanich school districts.

The first annual event embodying elementary schools from all Vancouver Island schdool districts was played at Willow Point school at Campbell River, ending with a winner and runnerup for grades one to seven after a season of games involving 6,625 players in 162 schools.

Local youngsters won in grades one, two, four, five and six, for prizes of $15 each. Runnersup each received $8.

Format of tournament day saw northern Vancouver Island districts pitted against southern districts, requiring players to overcome formidable travelling obstacles to meet on common ground.

Participants from Tahsis took a seaplane to Gold River before driving through the mountains to Campbell River; Port McNeill students made a four-hour ferry voyage then drove 50 miles; those from Port Hardy rose in time for a 5 a.m. start and 200-mile drive through the Nimpkish Valley, while Victoria, Saanich and Salt Spring Island players had 175 miles to drive.
